REPORT FISHERMEN SAW MISSING PLANE OF AMUNDSEN PARTY

Fogs Balk Attempts To Locate Members Of Nobile Crew

LONDON, June 30.— The search for Captain Roald Amundsen, noted Arctic explorer, who has been missing for almost two weeks, today shifted to the region between Bear Island and Spitzbergen.

A report received at Oslo, Norway, from Ibestad, Norway, stated that several fishermen returning from an expedition to Bear Island, declared they saw the French seaplane Latham about sixty miles northeast of the island on the night of June 18.

Bear Island is about halfway between Tromsoe, Norway and the southern coast of Spitzbergen. Amundsen, Major Rene Guilbaud, Lief Dietrichsen and two others left Tromsoe in the Latham on the morning of the eighteenth to search for General Nobile and his crew.

The fishermen said the plane was flying steadily and the motors appeared to be functioning properly. They said it was headed straight for the southern coast of Spitzbergen. Their story is significant because of the fact that the Latham may have come down on the icy waters between Bear Island and Spitzbergen and not in the regions further north which are now being scoured by planes.

KING'S BAY, Spitzbergen, June 30.—With the predicament of the five marooned survivors of the lost dirigible Italia and the Swedish aviator Lundborg becoming worse hourly, efforts to rescue these men from their dire plight were halked today by continued heavy fogs and generally bad weather conditions.

The ice-floe upon which the marooned men are encamped has drifted more than thirteen miles from its original position. The marooned men also radioed the Citta Di Milano that the floe was breaking up. This news was received here with alarm as it means that a plane equipped with skiis will have little chance of making a safe landing to rescue the men.

A message from the Citta Di Milano received today stated that the Swedish plane which attempted to reach the encampment and was forced to return because of the fog, was still awaiting better weather before attempting another flight from the base-ship.

The two Swedish airmen who flew this plane on its first attempt reported sighting two dog sledges about two days marching distance from the original position on the encampment. This caused much conjecture as to whether it were possible that some of the relief parties which are scouring the wastelands with dog teams were nearing the marooned party.

AIRMEN PROMOTED

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, June 30.—Two airmen, who risked their lives to search for General Umberto Nobile and the crew of the lost dirigible Italia have been advanced in rank by their respective governments for their daring. But it may be some time before either learns of his advancement.

Lieut. Lief Dietrichsen, who is missing with Capt Roald Amundsen, has been made a captain by the Norwegian government. Lieut. Lundborg, who rescued Nobile and is now marooned on an ice-floe with the survivors of the Italia's crew, has also been made a captain by the Swedish government.

MISS HELEN STILL MAKING PROGRESS

WIMBLEDON, England, June 30.—Miss Helen Wills this afternoon eliminated another competitor for the British women's singles tennis championship, defeating Mrs. M. Watson, 6-3, 6-0.

The match started evenly, Mrs. Watson going to three all after long rallies, but her resistance then weakened, and she could not withstand Miss Wills' hard drives.

The French team continued its winning stride in the British lawn tennis championship tournament when J. Brugnon and Henri Cochet defeated J. Crawford and H. Hopman, of Australia, 10-8, 6-2, 7-9, 4-6, 6-4 in the men's doubles this afternoon.

In the fourth round of the men's singles Baron H. L. Le Morpurgo, of Italy, beat R. De Buzelet, 6-4, 6-2, 6-2.

OHIO BUILDING TRADES PROSPER

COLUMBUS, O., June 30—Today, the end of the fiscal year 1927-1928, marks the close of the most prosperous year in building activities in Ohio, according to the Ohio Building Association League.

Approximately $55,000,000 will be paid to Ohio investors in dividends and interest for money deposited in the building and loan banking houses, the organization stated.

This $55,000,000, which building and loan officials claim to be the biggest dividends of any Ohio industry or business with the single exception of agriculture, was distributed among 2,000,000 depositors and stockholders in building and loan associations, the announcement declared.

Pointing out that the building and loan associations are responsible for much of the prosperity enjoyed by Ohioans during the past twelve months, the officers of the league asserted that Ohio companies have loaned $330,000,000, all of which eventually went to Ohio laborers and tradesmen.

The statement announced the financing of 50,000 new homes in the Buckeye State and the spending of $125,000,000 for remodeling and improving residences already built.

Ohio building and loan companies did not have a single failure during the past fiscal year, according to the report.

The $55,000,000 paid out in dividends and interest is the largest financial melon ever cut by building and loan associations of Ohio in any similar period, the announcement concluded.

YOUNG AIR MAIL PILOT IS LOST

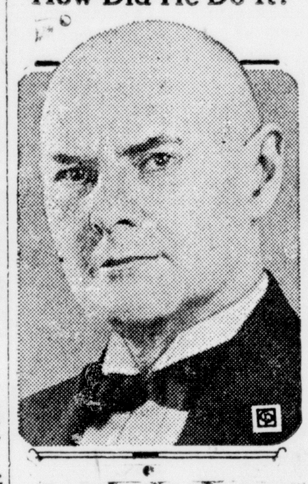

Search Instituted For Aviator Missing Since Thursday Night; Planes Aid In Hunt For Flyer.

ST. LOUIS, June 30.—The Robertson Aircraft Corporation here instituted one of the greatest searches in local aviation history today in a desperate attempt to locate Leslie H. Smith, 23-year-old air mail pilot missing since he left Little Rock, Ark., at 7:10 Thursday night.

Every available pilot was gathered at the airport here this morning, and each was assigned a definite territory to cover in the intensive search for the airman. At least thirty airplanes are expected to participate in the quest.

Major Frank Robertson, president of the aircraft corporation, announced a $500 reward to the one locating the missing flier. Robertson also announced he would request Col. John A. Paegelow, of Scott Field, Belleville, Ill., to send a dirigible into the territory to aid in the search.

How Did He Do It?

Federal and state authorities are continuing to investigate the affairs of the late Omar G. Patterson, above, of Noblesville, Ind., who committed suicide after signing a confession in which he admitted embezzling $147,000 from the Citizens State bank of Noblesville, where he was employed as a clerk. He financed many elaborate theater and musical events.

ALLEGED GANG HEAD ELUDES POLICE BY LANDING FROM BOAT

Suspected Of Detroit Robbery And Police Murder

CHICAGO, June 30—The steamer, Western States, which docked at the navy pier here at 9:30 this morning, held no trace of Paul Jaworski, Pennsylvania murderer.

Jaworski, said in a radiogram from Sault Ste. Marie to have been aboard the boat, was believed by Chicago officers to have left the ship at St. Ignace, Mich., and later fled to Canada. Police said he was accompanied by a woman in his escape.

Jaworski, wanted for half a dozen murders and under sentence of death in Pennsylvania, shot his way out of a Pittsburgh jail some time ago.

Jaworski is suspected of the death of Patrolman George Barstad, Detroit, who died June 25 from gunshot wounds received when a gang believed to have been led by Jaworski held up the Detroit News business office and escaped with $25,000.

Wanted "dead or alive," there are rewards totaling $15,000 outstanding for Jaworski.

Leader of a mob that harried western Pennsylvania with a series of major holdups, Jaworski has kept a jump ahead of the law ever since he evaded the death sentence by shooting his way out of the Allegheny County Jail in Pittsburgh.

Word came to Inspector Henry J. Garvin, head of the crime and bomb squad of Detroit, that a pal of Jaworski's had taken a steamer out of Buffalo to Detroit.

Acting on the information received, Garvin learned the man had left the boat in Detroit and gone to a nearby town to see Jaworski.

The trail then led back to Detroit, where the men had booked passage on the Duluth-bound passenger steamer, Juanita.

Garvin got in touch over long distance with state police at St. Ignace. He directed them to meet the boat at Mackinac Island. The instructions apparently were misunderstood, the state officers going to the Soo to intercept the boat.

Jaworski and his companion left the Juanita at Mackinac Island and got aboard the Chicago-bound steamer Western States at 6:45 last night. The boat is due to arrive at Chicago at 8 a. m. today.

Inspector Garvin immediately dispatched Detectives George Ludwig and Raymond Boettcher to Chicago.

GOVERNOR SMITH TO CONDUCT TYPICAL CAMPAIGN THIS YEAR

Will Take Stump As Democratic Standard Bearer To Talk To America As He Talked To New York In Past

ALBANY, June 30.—The voters of the United States will be treated to a typical Al Smith campaign this year, when the governor of New York takes the stump as the standard bearer of the Democratic party in the contest for the presidency. As far as Governor Smith is concerned it will be the sort of constructive campaign the people of New York have become familiar with in the past decade during which he was a candidate for the governorship five times and was defeated only once.

"I propose to talk to the American people the way I've talked to the people of my own state," the governor said last night, as he sat in the quiet of the executive mansion.

The nominee did not elaborate upon his campaign plans, but those who have followed his election battles in this state predict he will wage a "constructive campaign," following closely his general theory of campaigning. His plan of battle in the coming campaign is outlined by his associated as follows:

He does not intend to spend much time in attacking the errors of the Republicans as seen through Democratic spectacles. He does not believe in constantly reminding the voters of evils of the past. Instead he proposes to tell the definite thing he wants to do. In that kind of a campaign, he claims, he has always been successful.

If he follows his New York campaign style, as announced last night, there will be no "canned speeches." He will use no material which is simply handed out to him. He will talk of nothing he does not thoroughly understand.

The governor has made no arrangements concerning speech making and public appearances. He expects to see the Democratic national committeemen in New York City next week, and at that time some of the preliminary plans may be developed.

The governor does not intend to resign from his present office. If he serves out his entire term as governor up to midnight of next December 31 he will be eligible to retirement with an annual pension amounting to some $6,500.

UNIVERSITY CO-ED OBJECT OF SEARCH

WAUKESHA, Wis., June 30. — Bloodhounds scoured the countryside here today in a search for a trace of Margaret Fitzgerald, 18-year-old Marquette University co-ed who disappeared from her farm home near Mapleton, Wis., while attired only in a nightgown and kimona.

Margaret, in the opinion of District Attorney Herman Salen, was dragged from the front yard of her home through soggy marshland to an automobile. The tracks of a man were imprinted in the soft earth near her home.

The stalled automobile, owned by a neighbor, was found a short distance away. Evidence was presented tending to indicate the girl had been transferred to another machine. Although no warrants have been issued, Salen said police were searching for the neighbor. The district attorney said he believed the girl had not left her home voluntarily.

E. Fulton, manager of the flying field.

WHAT! ORGIES?

PARIS, June 30—Despite the efforts of a little group of reformers to have the police forbid it, the annual Quat's Art Ball was held last night at the Salle Wagram and, judging from the appearance of the revelers as they straggled homeward at dawn today, it was a complete success.

For the first time in the memory of the oldest art student a wave of puritanism swept over the Latin quarter not long before the date of the ball and many students refused to attend it. They claimed that some of the girl models wore even less clothing than the average flapper and that there were "orgies" among those present.

Calling themselves "the voice of youth," the student-reformers complained to the police that the ball "offends virtue and paints the various seekers of knowledge as libertines."

THEA RASCHE ABANDONS PLANS FOR TRANS-ATLANTIC FLIGHT

NEW YORK, June 30—Plans for her trans-Atlantic flight have been abandoned by Thea Rasche, the flying fraulein, it became known today, due to court wrangling.

Miss Rasche, who was to have hopped to Berlin in the Bellanca monoplane, North Star, provided for her by Mrs. James A. Stillman, will return reluctantly to Germany by steamer.

Announcement of her decision was made by representatives of Mrs. Stillman's, who explained that the aviatrix's efforts to reach an amicable settlement of her differences with her former backers had been blocked by them.

While Miss Rasche was conferring with her sponsor, at Pleasantville, N. Y., prior to the announcement that the flight would not be attempted, word came from Canada that the North Star had been flown from Cap De La Madeleine, Quebec, to the Cartiersville Airdrome at Montreal.

LEGAL BATTLE THREATENS DANCING FOOLS

NEW YORK, June 30—Nine couples staggered around the floor early today as the dance marathon at Madison Square Garden swung into its twentieth day, despite the efforts of city health authorities to stop the proceedings as a public nuisance and a menace to public health.

Milton D. Crandall, promoter of the dance derby, successfully defied the city, temporarily at least, when he came off victorious in a legal battle. An order by Dr. Louis I. Harris, city health commissioner, which was to have ended the marathon at two o'clock this morning, was temporarily nullified at the last minute when Crandall obtained an injunction from Supreme Court Justice Aaron J. Levy restraining police and health department officials from interfering with the dance.

The injunction is returnable at eleven o'clock this morning, when Justice Levy will give a final decision on the matter.

Bedlam broke loose shortly before two o'clock when a squad of police prepared to stop the marathon. Some of the 10,000 spectators who jammed the Garden cheered. Others booed.

Most of the dancers, although barely able to move, insisted that the dance go on. They had been plodding away for 460 hours, and did not intend to be deprived of a chance at the first prize of $5,000, the pot of gold at the end of the Terpischorean rainbow.

The staggering shufflers were determined to win all or nothing. They protested strenuously when Crandall, pressed by Dr. Harris to stop the marathon, agreed earlier to make an even division of the $5,000 among the contestants. under this arrangement, each would have received $277.78, or sixty cents an hour, for their growing pains.

All equipment of the mine officials said is completely wrecked.

LEAVE HOUSTON LOT HAPPIER THAN WHEN CONVENTION BEGAN

Democrats Believe They Were Smart In Convention.

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

HOUSTON, Tex., June 30. —The Democrats cleared out of Houston today a lot happier than they ever thought they could be when they came.

Above all the controversy over the prohibition plank, above all the warfare that waged over candidacies, the fact that party leaders chose to dwell upon was that Gov. Al Smith and Senator Joseph T. Robinson had both been nominated on the first ballot; that for the first time since 1882 a Democratic national convention had adopted a platform without a minority report having been submitted; and that for the first time in years the party candidate has been nominated without a serious rift in the party.

They believe that all of this augurs well for success this fall. November, of course, will tell whether those hopes are justified. Meanwhile, the Democrats are happy—that, is, all save the extreme outer fringe of the party are happy. But as to that, the party leaders plan back upon the paraphrase of an ancient political axiom:

"You can please some of the people some of the time, but you can't please all of the people all of the time."

The principal controversy about the whole convention centered today over whether the party had gone wet or dry in its platform. The platform declaration on prohibition was less than 100 words, yet today, there were scarcely less than 100 different interpretations as to its ultimate effect and meaning.

The plank criticized the Republicans for not enforcing the prohi-

GANG LEADER SAVES HIMSELF FROM GUNS OF RIVAL GANGMEN

Auto Machine Gun Users Ruffled By Counter Attack.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Eddie "Spike" O'Donnell, leader of the notorious O'Donnell Gang, was alive today—and smiling—when, by all the rules of gangland, he should be dead.

Spike's execution was attempted last night. He was attacked in a typical gangster style as he stood in front of his home on West Sixty-Third Street. The usual automobile heavily curtained to shield the identity of the assassins, drove up. Machine guns spit out their venomous volley.

But O'Donnell was not to be caught napping. With the first crack of the gun, he fell prone on the ground. Meanwhile his henchman bodyguards, secreted about the house apparently in anticipation of the attack, opened fire on the gangster car.

Surprised by the swift counter attack, the would-be-assassins lost their range on O'Donnell's form and all their bullets went wild. None of Spike's henchmen could be seen by the attackers. Confused and routed, the gangsters sped away, their deadly mission unfulfilled.

A solemn reminder was the funeral this morning of "Big Tim" Murphy, labor leader and "racketeer," who was shot down in front of his home last Tuesday night.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 30. — The Democrats cleared out of Houston today a lot happier than they ever thought they could be when they came.

Above all the controversy over the prohibition plank, above all the warfare that waged over candidacies, the fact that party leaders chose to dwell upon was that Gov. Al Smith and Senator Joseph T. Robinson had both been nominated on the first ballot; that for the first time since 1882 a Democratic national convention had adopted a platform without a minority report having been submitted; and that for the first time in years the party candidate has been nominated without a serious rift in the party.

They believe that all of this augurs well for success this fall. November, of course, will tell whether those hopes are justified. Meanwhile, the Democrats are happy—that, is, all save the extreme outer fringe of the party are happy. But as to that, the party leaders plan back upon the paraphrase of an ancient political axiom:

"You can please some of the people some of the time, but you can't please all of the people all of the time."

The principal controversy about the whole convention centered today over whether the party had gone wet or dry in its platform. The platform declaration on prohibition was less than 100 words, yet today, there were scarcely less than 100 different interpretations as to its ultimate effect and meaning.

The plank criticized the Republicans for not enforcing the prohi-

YOUNG AIR MAIL PILOT IS LOST

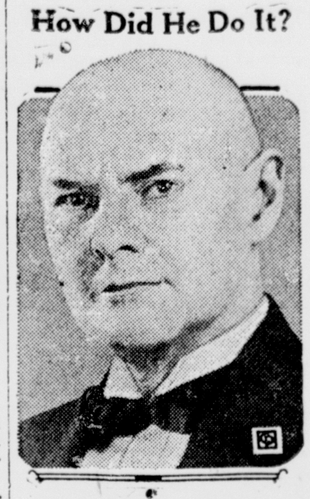

Search Instituted For Aviator Missing Since Thursday Night; Planes Aid In Hunt For Flyer.

ST. LOUIS, June 30.—The Robertson Aircraft Corporation here instituted one of the greatest searches in local aviation history today in a desperate attempt to locate Leslie H. Smith, 23-year-old air mail pilot missing since he left Little Rock, Ark., at 7:10 Thursday night.

Every available pilot was gathered at the airport here this morning, and each was assigned a definite territory to cover in the intensive search for the airman. At least thirty airplanes are expected to participate in the quest.

Major Frank Robertson, president of the aircraft corporation, announced a $500 reward to the one locating the missing flier. Robertson also announced he would request Col. John A. Paegelow, of Scott Field, Belleville, Ill., to send a dirigible into the territory to aid in the search.

ALLEGED GANG HEAD ELUDES POLICE BY LANDING FROM BOAT

Suspected Of Detroit Robbery And Police Murder

CHICAGO, June 30—The steamer, Western States, which docked at the navy pier here at 9:30 this morning, held no trace of Paul Jaworski, Pennsylvania murderer.

Jaworski, said in a radiogram from Sault Ste. Marie to have been aboard the boat, was believed by Chicago officers to have left the ship at St. Ignace, Mich., and later fled to Canada. Police said he was accompanied by a woman in his escape.

Jaworski, wanted for half a dozen murders and under sentence of death in Pennsylvania, shot his way out of a Pittsburgh jail some time ago.

Jaworski is suspected of the death of Patrolman George Barstad, Detroit, who died June 25 from gunshot wounds received when a gang believed to have been led by Jaworski held up the Detroit News business office and escaped with $25,000.

Wanted "dead or alive," there are rewards totaling $15,000 outstanding for Jaworski.

Leader of a mob that harried western Pennsylvania with a series of major holdups, Jaworski has kept a jump ahead of the law ever since he evaded the death sentence by shooting his way out of the Allegheny County Jail in Pittsburgh.

Word came to Inspector Henry J. Garvin, head of the crime and bomb squad of Detroit, that a pal of Jaworski's had taken a steamer out of Buffalo to Detroit.

Acting on the information received, Garvin learned the man had left the boat in Detroit and gone to a nearby town to see Jaworski.

The trail then led back to Detroit, where the men had booked passage on the Duluth-bound passenger steamer, Juanita.

Garvin got in touch over long distance with state police at St. Ignace. He directed them to meet the boat at Mackinac Island. The instructions apparently were misunderstood, the state officers going to the Soo to intercept the boat.

Jaworski and his companion left the Juanita at Mackinac Island and got aboard the Chicago-bound steamer Western States at 6:45 last night. The boat is due to arrive at Chicago at 8 a. m. today.

Inspector Garvin immediately dispatched Detectives George Ludwig and Raymond Boettcher to Chicago.

GOVERNOR SMITH TO CONDUCT TYPICAL CAMPAIGN THIS YEAR

Will Take Stump As Democratic Standard Bearer To Talk To America As He Talked To New York In Past

ALBANY, June 30.—The voters of the United States will be treated to a typical Al Smith campaign this year, when the governor of New York takes the stump as the standard bearer of the Democratic party in the contest for the presidency. As far as Governor Smith is concerned it will be the sort of constructive campaign the people of New York have become familiar with in the past decade during which he was a candidate for the governorship five times and was defeated only once.

"I propose to talk to the American people the way I've talked to the people of my own state," the governor said last night, as he sat in the quiet of the executive mansion.

The nominee did not elaborate upon his campaign plans, but those who have followed his election battles in this state predict he will wage a "constructive campaign," following closely his general theory of campaigning. His plan of battle in the coming campaign is outlined by his associated as follows:

He does not intend to spend much time in attacking the errors of the Republicans as seen through Democratic spectacles. He does not believe in constantly reminding the voters of evils of the past. Instead he proposes to tell the definite thing he wants to do. In that kind of a campaign, he claims, he has always been successful.

If he follows his New York campaign style, as announced last night, there will be no "canned speeches." He will use no material which is simply handed out to him. He will talk of nothing he does not thoroughly understand.

The governor has made no arrangements concerning speech making and public appearances. He expects to see the Democratic national committeemen in New York City next week, and at that time some of the preliminary plans may be developed.

The governor does not intend to resign from his present office. If he serves out his entire term as governor up to midnight of next December 31 he will be eligible to retirement with an annual pension amounting to some $6,500.

UNIVERSITY CO-ED OBJECT OF SEARCH

WAUKESHA, Wis., June 30. — Bloodhounds scoured the countryside here today in a search for a trace of Margaret Fitzgerald, 18-year-old Marquette University co-ed who disappeared from her farm home near Mapleton, Wis., while attired only in a nightgown and kimona.

Margaret, in the opinion of District Attorney Herman Salen, was dragged from the front yard of her home through soggy marshland to an automobile. The tracks of a man were imprinted in the soft earth near her home.

The stalled automobile, owned by a neighbor, was found a short distance away. Evidence was presented tending to indicate the girl had been transferred to another machine. Although no warrants have been issued, Salen said police were searching for the neighbor. The district attorney said he believed the girl had not left her home voluntarily.

WHAT! ORGIES?

PARIS, June 30—Despite the efforts of a little group of reformers to have the police forbid it, the annual Quat's Art Ball was held last night at the Salle Wagram and, judging from the appearance of the revelers as they straggled homeward at dawn today, it was a complete success.

For the first time in the memory of the oldest art student a wave of puritanism swept over the Latin quarter not long before the date of the ball and many students refused to attend it. They claimed that some of the girl models wore even less clothing than the average flapper and that there were "orgies" among those present.

Calling themselves "the voice of youth," the student-reformers complained to the police that the ball "offends virtue and paints the various seekers of knowledge as libertines."

THEA RASCHE ABANDONS PLANS FOR TRANS-ATLANTIC FLIGHT

NEW YORK, June 30—Plans for her trans-Atlantic flight have been abandoned by Thea Rasche, the flying fraulein, it became known today, due to court wrangling.

Miss Rasche, who was to have hopped to Berlin in the Bellanca monoplane, North Star, provided for her by Mrs. James A. Stillman, will return reluctantly to Germany by steamer.

Announcement of her decision was made by representatives of Mrs. Stillman's, who explained that the aviatrix's efforts to reach an amicable settlement of her differences with her former backers had been blocked by them.

While Miss Rasche was conferring with her sponsor, at Pleasantville, N. Y., prior to the announcement that the flight would not be attempted, word came from Canada that the North Star had been flown from Cap De La Madeleine, Quebec, to the Cartiersville Airdrome at Montreal.

GANG LEADER SAVES HIMSELF FROM GUNS OF RIVAL GANGMEN

Auto Machine Gun Users Ruffled By Counter Attack.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Eddie "Spike" O'Donnell, leader of the notorious O'Donnell Gang, was alive today—and smiling—when, by all the rules of gangland, he should be dead.

Spike's execution was attempted last night. He was attacked in a typical gangster style as he stood in front of his home on West Sixty-Third Street. The usual automobile heavily curtained to shield the identity of the assassins, drove up. Machine guns spit out their venomous volley.

But O'Donnell was not to be caught napping. With the first crack of the gun, he fell prone on the ground. Meanwhile his henchman bodyguards, secreted about the house apparently in anticipation of the attack, opened fire on the gangster car.

Surprised by the swift counter attack, the would-be-assassins lost their range on O'Donnell's form and all their bullets went wild. None of Spike's henchmen could be seen by the attackers. Confused and routed, the gangsters sped away, their deadly mission unfulfilled.

A solemn reminder was the funeral this morning of "Big Tim" Murphy, labor leader and "racketeer," who was shot down in front of his home last Tuesday night.

LEGAL BATTLE THREATENS DANCING FOOLS

NEW YORK, June 30—Nine couples staggered around the floor early today as the dance marathon at Madison Square Garden swung into its twentieth day, despite the efforts of city health authorities to stop the proceedings as a public nuisance and a menace to public health.

Milton D. Crandall, promoter of the dance derby, successfully defied the city, temporarily at least, when he came off victorious in a legal battle. An order by Dr. Louis I. Harris, city health commissioner, which was to have ended the marathon at two o'clock this morning, was temporarily nullified at the last minute when Crandall obtained an injunction from Supreme Court Justice Aaron J. Levy restraining police and health department officials from interfering with the dance.

The injunction is returnable at eleven o'clock this morning, when Justice Levy will give a final decision on the matter.

Bedlam broke loose shortly before two o'clock when a squad of police prepared to stop the marathon. Some of the 10,000 spectators who jammed the Garden cheered. Others booed.

Most of the dancers, although barely able to move, insisted that the dance go on. They had been plodding away for 460 hours, and did not intend to be deprived of a chance at the first prize of $5,000, the pot of gold at the end of the Terpischorean rainbow.

The staggering shufflers were determined to win all or nothing. They protested strenuously when Crandall, pressed by Dr. Harris to stop the marathon, agreed earlier to make an even division of the $5,000 among the contestants. under this arrangement, each would have received $277.78, or sixty cents an hour, for their growing pains.

MARSHAL OTEY WALKER NOT TO WALK HOME; LANDS JOB

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to The Gazette

HOUSTON, Tex., June 30.—Marshal Otey Walker of the Home Town isn't walking home, after all.

With the close of the Democratic convention, it was believed, due to the high cost of certain essentials to a gathering, the Marshal would be among the tourists who know a good barn when they see one at nightfall.

The Marshal today announced, however, that he had accepted an offer from Central Press to act as special correspondent at all important events in the future, he to choose the events.

The Marshal thereupon sent this dispatch to his home office:

"Due to heated conference with female dry delegation because of my vote as delegate for wet plank, I am going to take rest on beach at Galveston. I am laying off this Texas liquor. I do not want my sight to fail me at this critical time. How about sending me to interview Tunney and Heeney after seeing the sights at Galveston beach?"

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. DAVID W. PAINTER FRIDAY AFTERNOON

Mrs. Aletha L. Painter, 63, wife of David W. Painter, died at her home on the Peterson Road, four miles south of Xenia, at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Painter had been in ill health for the last two weeks but she had appeared in good condition early Friday and her death came most unexpectedly.

Born on a farm on the Hussey Pike September 1, 1864, she was a life-long resident of Greene County.

Mrs. Painter was the daughter of the late D. M. and Eliza Jane St. John and was married September 22, 1882.

Besides being a member of the Union M. E. Church, Mrs. Painter was also an active member of the Ladies' Aid Society and the Missionary Society of this church.

Surviving besides her husband are the following children: O. E., Richmond, Ind.; Mrs. R. B. McKay, Wilmington Pike; Mrs. Elwood Stroup, Maple Corner Road and Mrs. Clement Conklin, Wilmington Pike; three brothers, A. H. St. John, Hussey Pike; A. E., Xenia, and Everett, near Xenia; and three sisters, Mrs. Ella Walker, Xenia; Mrs. Ada Thomas, Jamestown, and Mrs. Bertha Hemstead, near Wilmington. Twelve grand children also survive.

Funeral services will be conducted at the residence at 1:30 o'clock Monday afternoon and again at 2 o'clock at the Union M. E. Church. Burial will be made in Woodland Cemetery, Xenia.

JUNE 1928 NEXT TO WAR YEAR FOR BRIDES

Demonstrating the popularity of June as a bridal month, records of the marriage license bureau in Probate Court reveal that more licenses have been issued during the last month than in any preceding month in Greene County since December, 1917, during the World War.

Thirty-nine licenses were granted and six refused because of nonresidence during June. The record number of forty was issued in December, 1917.

During the intervening eleven years the nearest approach to the record number of December, 1917 and June, 1928 was in December, 1922 when thirty-eight couples obtained licenses to marry.

Poems that Live

TO A LADY ASKING HOW LONG HE WOULD LOVE HER

IT is not, Celia, in our power
To say how long our love will last;
It may be we within this hour
May lose those joys we now do taste:
The Blessed, that immortal be,
From change in love are only free.

Then since we mortal lovers are,
Ask not how long our love will last;
But while it does, let us take care
Each minute be with pleasure passed:
Were it not madness to deny
To live because we're sure to die?

—George Etherege (1635-1691)

BEEBE WILL CATCH FISH MILES UNDER SEA; NOT AFRAID

LONDON, June 30.—"Afraid of sharks? Not in the least! They are the most indolent, awkward, chinless cowards that infest the sea."

The speaker was Dr. William Beebe, the famous American scientist and explorer, and his derogatory opinion of these much-feared denizens of the deep was expressed in an interview with International News Service during a visit to this city.

"I have been in shark infested waters," Dr. Beebe continued, "wearing only a diving helmet and a bathing suit. Never once has a shark attacked me. They were too cowardly."

Dr. Beebe, who is Director of the Tropical Research Department of the New York Zoological Society and the author of a number of books on exploration, was in London completing preparations for a new venture in deep-sea research.

In Hudson River

"At the end of this month," he said, "I intend to plunge into the mysteries of submarine life in the ancient gorge of the Hudson River, no more than 125 miles from New York City.

"There I shall dive a mile deep. The ocean conditions at that depth are practically the same all over the world. Through choosing the Hudson's gorge, we shall be able, at what may be called the doors of New York City, to get at any of the dwellers of the deep that are to be found almost anywhere in the world.

"A new feature of the work will be an effort to keep the deep-sea fish alive for exhibition in the New York Zoological Society's aquarium. They will be caught by special dredges, put under suitable water pressure in tanks, and rushed to New York.

"A new diving cylinder, in which it will be possible to study life at a mile below the suraface, has been contrived, and one of the reasons I'm in London is to get for the cylinder glass that will withstand the great pressure of water at that depth.

Signal to Surface

"The cylinder wil contain the requisite supply of oxygen, and there will be no connection with the surface except the cable. As I shall be using submarine detectors, I shall be able to communicate with those at the surface by tapping on the cylinder."

Dr. Beebe, who expeditions to the Sargasso Sea and the Galapagos region of the Pacific have made naturalistic history, plans to start on his Hudson River explorations imediately upon his return to the United States.

"I am convinced," he declared, "that what we shall find in the Hudson River will amaze those who erroneously believe that queer types of undersea life are found only in distant regions."

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch to The Gazette

HOUSTON, Tex., June 30.—Marshal Otey Walker of the Home Town isn't walking home, after all.

With the close of the Democratic convention, it was believed, due to the high cost of certain essentials to a gathering, the Marshal would be among the tourists who know a good barn when they see one at nightfall.

The Marshal today announced, however, that he had accepted an offer from Central Press to act as special correspondent at all important events in the future, he to choose the events.

The Marshal thereupon sent this dispatch to his home office:

"Due to heated conference with female dry delegation because of my vote as delegate for wet plank, I am going to take rest on beach at Galveston, I am laying off this Texas liquor. I do not want my sight to fail me at this critical time. How about sending me to interview Tunney and Heeney after seeing the sights at Galveston beach?"

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. DAVID W. PAINTER FRIDAY AFTERNOON

Mrs. Aletha L. Painter, 63, wife of David W. Painter, died at her home on the Peterson Road, four miles south of Xenia, at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Painter had been in ill health for the last two weeks but she had appeared in good condition early Friday and her death came most unexpectedly.

Born on a farm on the Hussey Pike September 1, 1864, she was a life-long resident of Greene County.

Mrs. Painter was the daughter of the late D. M. and Eliza Jane St. John and was married September 22, 1882.

Besides being a member of the Union M. E. Church, Mrs. Painter was also an active member of the Ladies' Aid Society and the Missionary Society of this church.

Surviving besides her husband are the following children: O. E., Richmond, Ind.; Mrs. R. B. McKay, Wilmington Pike; Mrs. Elwood Stroup, Maple Corner Road and Mrs. Clement Conklin, Wilmington Pike; three brothers, A. H. St. John, Hussey Pike; A. E., Xenia, and Everett, near Xenia; and three sisters, Mrs. Ella Walker, Xenia; Mrs. Ada Thomas, Jamestown, and Mrs. Bertha Hemstead, near Wilmington. Twelve grand children also survive.

Funeral services will be conducted at the residence at 1:30 o'clock Monday afternoon and again at 2 o'clock at the Union M. E. Church. Burial will be made in Woodland Cemetery, Xenia.

JUNE 1928 NEXT TO WAR YEAR FOR BRIDES

Demonstrating the popularity of June as a bridal month, records of the marriage license bureau in Probate Court reveal that more licenses have been issued during the last month than in any preceding month in Greene County since December, 1917, during the World War.

Thirty-nine licenses were granted and six refused because of non-residence during June. The record number of forty was issued in December, 1917.

During the intervening eleven years the nearest approach to the record number of December, 1917 and June, 1928 was in December, 1922 when thirty-eight couples obtained licenses to marry.

Poems that Live

TO A LADY ASKING HOW LONG HE WOULD LOVE HER

IT is not, Celia, in our power
To say how long our love will last;
It may be we within this hour
May lose those joys we now do taste:
The Blessed, that immortal be,
From change in love are only free.

Then since we mortal lovers are,
Ask not how long our love will last;
But while it does, let us take care
Each minute be with pleasure passed:
Were it not madness to deny
To live because we're sure to die?

—George Etherege (1635-1691)

BEEBE WILL CATCH FISH MILES UNDER SEA; NOT AFRAID

LONDON, June 30.—"Afraid of sharks? Not in the least! They are the most indolent, awkward, chinless cowards that infest the sea."

The speaker was Dr. William Beebe, the famous American scientist and explorer, and his derogatory opinion of these much-feared denizens of the deep was expressed in an interview with International News Service during a visit to this city.

"I have been in shark infested waters," Dr. Beebe continued, "wearing only a diving helmet and a bathing suit. Never once has a shark attacked me. They were too cowardly."

Dr. Beebe, who is Director of the Tropical Research Department of the New York Zoological Society and the author of a number of books on exploration, was in London completing preparations for a new venture in deep-sea research

In Hudson River

"At the end of this month," he said, "I intend to plunge into the mysteries of submarine life in the ancient gorge of the Hudson River, no more than 125 miles from New York City.

"There I shall dive a mile deep. The ocean conditions at that depth are practically the same all over the world. Through choosing the Hudson's gorge, we shall be able, at what may be called the doors of New York City, to get at any of the dwellers of the deep that are to be found almost anywhere in the world.

"A new feature of the work will be an effort to keep the deep-sea fish alive for exhibition in the New York Zoological Society's aquarium. They will be caught by special dredges, put under suitable water pressure in tanks, and rushed to New York.

"A new diving cylinder, in which it will be possible to study life at a mile below the suraface, has been contrived, and one of the reasons I'm in London is to get for the cylinder glass that will withstand the great pressure of water at that depth.

Signal to Surface

"The cylinder wil contain the requisite supply of oxygen, and there will be no connection with the surface except the cable. As I shall be using submarine detectors, I shall be able to communicate with those at the surface by tapping on the cylinder."

Dr. Beebe, who expeditions to the Sargasso Sea and the Galapagos region of the Pacific have made naturalistic history, plans to start on his Hudson River explorations imediately upon his return to the United States.

"I am convinced," he declared, "that what we shall find in the Hudson River will amaze those who erroneously believe that queer types of undersea life are found only in distant regions."

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

OUR SAFETY—The name of the Lord is a strong tower: the righteous runneth into it, and is safe.—Prov. 18:10.

CREATING EMPLOYMENT

The rapidly increasing use of power in industry, instead of reducing employment as too often believed, ultimately increases opportunities for employment, according to Magnus W. Alexander, President of the National Industrial Conference Board.

"It goes without saying," Mr. Magnus stated, "that a certain amount of temporary, and even permanent displacement of labor, is inevitable in the progress made in waste elimination and improved efficiency through the mechanization of industry. On the average in all manufacturing industries, 71 wage earners in 1925 produced the same volume of output as did 100 in 1914. But while the output per wage earner increased 35 per cent in volume, the total manufacturing volume in the same period increased more than 65 per cent and necessitated a large increase in the number of workers required, amounting to 1,500,000 individuals."

The present high wage scale of the American worker is directly traceable to his increased efficiency, through use of power. Its benefits are endless. Rather than causing unemployment it creates employment on a higher economic plane.

DOLLAR NOW BUYS MORE

The purchasing power of the dollar is at present higher than it has been for nearly five years, as measured by the average living cost of the American wage earner, according to the National Industrial Conference Board. Its lowest point was in July, 1920. The post-war deflation has been steadily remedied and living costs today are the least they have been since June, 1923.

This is a sure sign of prosperity. Mechanical perfection and increase of efficiency in industry has benefited the worker in two ways: It has increased his wage-earning power and decreased the price of commodities he must buy. It is estimated that today the purchasing power of an industrial worker's weekly pay is 35 per cent higher than at the outbreak of the World war.

TEN MINUTES FOR EACH BUSHEL

In 1855, three hours and three minutes were required to produce a bushel of wheat, according to the Antwerp, Ohio, Argus. Now, less than ten minutes are required, because of the utilization of the tractor and othed labor-saving machinery.

The hit-and-miss agricultural methods of an earlier day have disappeared behind the march of progress. Invention and scientific methods have resulted in an agricultural revolution, and the farmer is emerging happier, more comfortable and more prosperous.

When fortune smiles at some people they kick because she doesn't burst out laughing.

The problem now before the political managers is how to choose a president in such a way that the people will think they did it.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

EGOTISM

A certain American statesman of recent years had a friend who was such a good friend that he told the statesman about his faults.

"The trouble with you," said the friend, "is that while nobody questions your ability and your brilliant attainments, you are so egotistic you are making yourself unpopular. Think this over. I am telling you as your friend."

In a few days the statesman came back. He said to his friend: "You are right. I am egotistic. I see it. I thank you. But I call your attention to the fact that most other great men have been egotistic. Look at Julius Caesar, Napoleon and all the rest."

There is a difference between having self-assurance and being hopelessly egotistic.

NO 100 PERCENTERS

Unless it be the Indian there are no one hundred per cent Americans. Let Americans boast as much as they please, they come from all the races of the earth. Intelligence and thoughtful living and good citizenship come out of all races. Don't fret about your ancestors or brag about them either. Think about your own record—here and now.

LEARNING BY HANDICAP

Addressing a race betterment conference some time ago, Dr. Irving Fisher, professor of political economy at Yale, said, "my studies in health arose originally from my own lack of health 30 years ago."

Theodore Roosevelt was noted for his interest in athletic affairs, and yet he was a sickly youth in college.

It is a man's handicap which often calls his attention to the extra effort which will make him a real success. Handicap demands a margin of effort—the margin of effort over what the ordinary man gives a job. Often big results come by the route of serious handicap.

IGNORANT?

People may be unlettered but not ignorant. Many men and women who never learned to read or write have been good and great people. Education is not necessarily college education. The man who can most successfully adjust himself to the changing circumstances of life is the educated man.

UNITING CHURCHES

A poll shows about 90 per cent of more than 800 clergymen in favor of the union of the Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregational churches. Not so many years ago the result of such a vote would have been different. It's a sign the intellectual standard is going up.

The Diary of a New Yorker

by CLARK KINNAIRD

NEW YORK, June 30.—When a sight-seeing party came up from Wilkes-Barre, Pa., recently, it was considered a big story, because it was announced the New York visit was costing the excursionists only $10 each. Apparently journals believe Gotham deserves its reputation of being the most expensive city to visit. Well, it isn't. Two persons may spend two days here and have a whoopee time for $25, exclusive of railroad fare.

I am arranging a two-day $25 visit to the greatest city in the world for my cousin and his wife, of Richmond, Va. Persons in territory accessible to New York overnight, and able to spare Saturday and Sunday from home and business, can emulate their program, which I guarantee to be without a dull moment.

Of course, inexpensive visits are possible for persons living at a distance, too.

My cousin and his wife will arrive early in the morning, and go to one of numerous comfortable hotels, where two persons may obtain a room with bath for $5 a day. (They could get less pretentious quarters.) They will breakfast at an attractive restaurant, where the check for two persons of average morning appetite is $1.00. They will not be foolish about tipping. Then they will subway to City Hall square. After looking around there, they will ascend to Woolworth building to get the best and most thrilling view of New York. There is a charge for the tower trip—$1. An hour, or two hours, may be spent there. There certainly is enough to see!

After descending, they will walk down Broadway, craning their necks at the tall buildings, peeping into Maiden Lane, the great jewelry center, and Wall street and passing famous old Trinity church. Possibly they will pause in Trinity graveyard, see the tombstones of celebrated pioneer Americans, and rest amid the turmoil of the financial district. Going on down Broadway, they will gape at the Standard Oil building, Bowling Green, and enter Battery park. Unless they want to see the Aquarium, they will not pause long there, but take the Staten Island ferry. Crossing the ferry, the whole panorama of lower Manhattan will unfold itself before their eyes. They will see the Statue of Liberty, and liners going down to sea. This ferry ride is the biggest nickel's worth New York has to offer.

When they return to Battery park it will be after noon. They will take the Sixth avenue elevated get a glimpse of Greenwich Village from the air, and go to Herald square. After lunching in one of many places nearby, they will venture into the great department stores. These, undoubtedly, are among the great sights of the city, and the Missus will want to wander around in them, even if she doesn't intend to buy.

Of course, with Broadway near, they'll want to go to a show. On Saturday, attractions tack on an extra charge. Nevertheless, it won't be necessary for them to pay the exorbitant prices one hears about. By asking for balcony seats through the ticket agency at the hotel, or by visiting Leblang's, the cut-rate ticket institution at Broadway and Forty-third sreet, southeast corner,, they will be able to go to a good show for no more than $5 each, possibly for less. If they get tickets at Leblang's, they'll avoid the Saturday rush by going there—by subway—direct from Herald square, before returning to their hotel to rest.

They'll dine at one of the restaurants in Forty-third, Forty-fourth, or Forty-fifth street, near Broadway, where an excellent seven-course dinner is available for $1.25 each. They'll walk to the theatre, knowing that there's a motor jam in Broadway from 8 to 12.

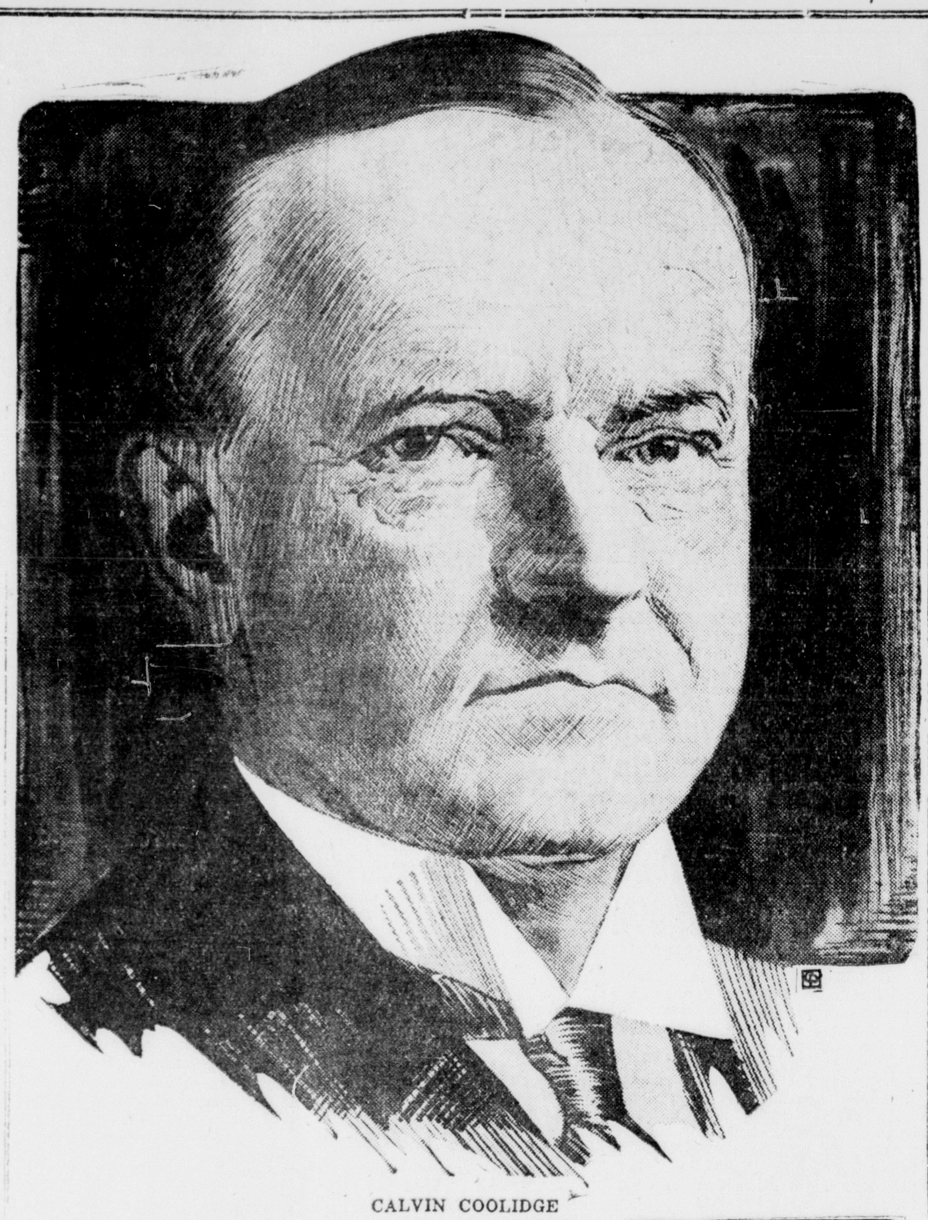

After the show they may have yearnings to see some night club life, but since they've seen pictures of Texas Guinan, and haven't money to waste in buying charged apple cider as champaigne at $25 a quart, they'll gape at the lights, and go to the flea circus in 42nd street; or walk to Fifth Avenue and take a bus that will give them the opportunity of seeing Riverside Drive and the Hudson by night. They'll return by subway and be back at the hotel by 1:30 a. m.

Saturday, away from the kids and cares, they'll want to sleep late. They may, however, get up in time to go to one of New York's many interesting churches — the Little Church Around the Corner, St. Patrick's Cathedral, John Roach Straton's Calvary Baptist church, the Rockefeller - Fosdick church or to Dr. Cadman's temple, in Brooklyn. But they probably won't be out before 11. After a combined breakfast and luncheon, they'll take a bus in Fifth Avenue to Washington Square and Greenwich Village. They'll return by a bus that will take them out Fifth Avenue to 125th street, giving ample opporunity to rubberneck at the homes of the wealthy and the great. Returning, they'll stop at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, which opens at 1 p. m. on Sundays and spend an hour or two there.

They will dine at an excellent English tavern in 5th street, after they have packed and checked their bags at the hotel (in New York one has to check out before 6 p. m.). A little later in the evening they will board the train, minus headaches and purseaches.

For persons traveling alone, or for two men or for two women, many different but no more expensive programs may be arranged.

Only by using money can a child learn what money can do, and what its limitations are. In order to get this experience, he should have money over which he has complete control, beginning in early childhood with very small amounts and increasing with his developments.

Italy.

The women of Italy have always been famous for their rich olive skins, their sleek dark hair, and their magnificent black eyes. Unfortunately, the Italian people, though they are "children of the sun," mature early, and therefore it is most necessary that the women take every possible precaution to keep their complexions and their beauty.

Their suntinted skins, warm and lovely though they are in coloring, are normally inclined toward olliness. To counteract this condition is no so difficult an undertaking, but the Italian woman presents a real problem to the beauty scientist, for not only must the olly condition of youth be corrected, but another, quite different and more serious one avoided. In maturity, and it is an early maturity at best, a sluggishness sets in, and it is this condition which results in an unlovely swarthiness with deep-set lines and wrinkles, which nullify whatever youth remains.

The problem of the Italian woman taxed my skill to the utmost. I introduced the penetrative, blackhead and open pore washes in Rome with immediate success. But for every washing recommendation, I was particular to recommend a good active cleansing and massage cream, with stimulating properties and active stimulants to counteract advancing age.

The beauties of Italy know the natural affinity for olive skins and red lips. The golden brown skin, with a touch of color in it, to suggest the vital radiance of perfect health, is doubly lovely. They prize crushed rose leaves rouge and their lipsticks, as an artist guards his brushes, for cosmetics enhance the beauty of the sun-kissed Italian signoras. The warm, ruby red is the most popular shade of lipstick there.

In vivid contrast to their olive skins and their red lips are Italian eyes, usually a soft, romantic, lovely brown, or a flashing, piercing, beautiful black. Nowhere in the world are feminine eyes, or masculine eyes, either so expressively beautiful as they are in the native Italians.

The Latin coquette knows perfectly well, too, the lure of her eyes, and she takes delight in making them even more enchanting. She intensifies the black or the deep brown of her eyebrows with an eyebrow stick, arching them delicately; she uses mascara or eyelash cream on her long lashes, to make them curl more entrancingly, and draw attention to their superior length, and they use their lovely eyes, secure in the knowledge that the man who fails to be smitten by their beauty is blind.

Household Hints

MENU HINT

Why not simplify the night meal on warm summer days and serve a club sandwich instead of the usual meat and potatoes? It might be served on the porch or in the yard, if desired. Any good cold meat may be used in the sandwiches. For dessert, cookies and berries are a good choice, or ice cream or cake with cake or cookies.

Club Sandwich Stuffed Olives
Radishes Young Onions
Iced Tea or Coffee
Sliced Pineapple and Berries
Cookies

Today's Recipes

Club Sandwich—Sliced chicken, veal or pork are good to use, with some crisp bacon, lettuce or romaine, a few sliced tomatoes and mayonnaise on toasted bread. A little horseradish may add to its relish.

Iced Coffee—Make fresh coffee and, when cool, pour over cracked ice in tall glasses. Have plenty of ice and either plain or whipped cream to serve with it.

Suggestions

Tables, Tables

There are tables for everything nowadays. For instance, there is the davenport table, which may be placed against the wall or in front of a window. There is the end table to set beside the easy chair or at the end of the davenport; nested tables, which are a boon to the small flat, because they take up little space, as they fit one under the other, but which may be spread out for cards or tea. Then there is the low coffee table and the console table, whose place is in the hall, and the liver-shaped table or small formal table upon which calling cards are dropped. Dining tables may be small to fit the smaller quarters. Some have leaves to be raised when needed, others have buttons, which, when pressed, cause leaves to spring forth at the ends.

HOW TO KEEP BUTTER IN HOT WEATHER

A helpful suggestion as to how to keep butter firm is contained in the current issue of "Successful Farming." It reads: "When ice cannot be had butter may be kept cool in this way: Put it on a dish which has been placed in a shallow vessel of cold water and cover with an inverted new earthen flowerpot which has been scalded and left to cool. The pot should rest in the water and water should be changed from time to time. Cared for in this way, butter will keep firm even in hot weather."

BABY LOCOMOTION

The normal baby, if allowed to, begins to make efforts to creep from the sixth to the eighth month. He usually tries to stand up by the ninth month, and by the fourteenth is able to walk.

This development of locomotion varies in different children, some perfectly healthy babies developing much later than others.

The usual method of creeping is on the hands and knees, but not a few sit on their little bottoms and hitch themselves along with their feet.

The most unusual method of locomotion is going around on all fours, like an animal. In the October, 1927, number of the American Journal of Physical Anthropology, Dr. Ales Hrdlicka has an article on this method. He had reported some cases in a previous article in the Journal, and it created so much attention that five more cases were sent to him.

I'll report three of them:

Case 1—"At the age of about 10½ months, my daughter began to adopt the practice of running on all fours, and within a couple of weeks, obtained great proficiency and high speed. Before she was a year old, she went up and down the stairs backwards in the same way. She didn't attempt to walk until she was 14 months old. She adopted her peculiar method of locomotion without instructions. She was a perfectly normal child, and is now at the age of 19, a senior in Radcliffe college."

Case 2—"My baby first propelled herself by sliding herself on her stomach, pushing herself with her hands and feet, at the age of 9 months. At age of 10 1-2, she began walking around on her hands and feet. At 12½ months, she started walking by herself. She had perfect control, no fear, and stepped right off, and unlike many babies who are wobbly and fall after walking a short distance, she walked steadily, would stop and stand still or turn around and walk in a different direction at will."

Case 3—"I realize my child was somewhat unusual in walking on all fours, but chiefly I thanked God that he did not get the knees of his stockings ragged and dirty. He never crawled as most babies do, but started walking on all fours when he was about 10 months of age. He started walking at 15 months, except when he was in a hurry, then he would sprint on all fours!"

Dr. Hrdlicka reported in all eleven cases, and he would like more reports. If your baby has adopted this unusual method of locomotion—evidently it is a good one—will you write and tell me about it, please, and I'll pass it on to Dr. Hrdlicka.

It is quite evident that in our evolution we walked on all fours at one time. Some investigators believe that some of our troubles come from the fact that we have not been using the upright position long enough to adapt our organs to this position.

Going back to the habit of all fours occasionally is a very beneficial practice. It helps prolapsed organs back to place and strengthens the abdominal wall markedly. This is one of the exercises recommended to women after childbirth.

Play games with your children walking on all fours.. It is a wonderful exercise for all the muscles and joints.

Behind The Scenes in Houston, Texas

By CHARLES P. STEWART

HOUSTON, June 30. — The newspaper gang, as usual, have been the chief national convention sufferers this year.

The Republican politicians went to Kansas City and then home to rest. The Democratic politicians did the same thing by Houston. The reporters, already tuckered out at "K. C.," had to go right ahead with the long trek southward—and, b'lieve me, 'twas a hard trip.

To say that that journey's the hottest on earth doubtless will give offense at both ends of the line and all the way between.

Nevertheless, I've crossed the equator at sea level with less discomfort. Bill Davy, of Central Press, my pal, says he can't speak as to the equator with exact geographical certainty, but is prepared to back me up relative to any place in general this side of hell.

The railroad folks in Kansas City told us we couldn't get through to Houston in anything classier than a cattle car while the convention season was on. We took a chance anyway.

"Could we get a berth?" we asked the Pullman conductor after we were on board.

"Sure," said the conductor. "All you want."

Moral—if any—never pay any attention to what the higher-up traffic folks say. If they knew their stuff, maybe we wouldn't have to pay the prices on sleeping cars that we do. How the heck can they expect to make money—shooting whole trains of cars out half filled—with passengers turned away from the ticket windows on the ground that there's no more room?

"Only thing is," the conductor apologized, "I'm afraid one of you boys'll have to take an upper."

"What th' blinkety-blank-blank do we care!" I observed, intending to minimize what, in reality, was no inconvenience to either of us.

"My!" said the conductor, shocked, "what language!"

"Well," defensively interposed Bill, to whom I'd been relating reminiscenses, "you can't expect a man who has spent a year in Shanghai to be too refined."

"I spent a year in San Quentin," quoth the conductor, "and I'm more refined than that."

We hit an automobile on the road somewhere in a treeless country, as flat as a plate, where that driver must have been able to see us coming for miles.

The automobile complex is a funny thing. My friend George Britt of New York, movie press agent and a chronic autoist, told me a story once that illustrates it to a T.

It seems George was out riding with his mother one day. The road parallelled a railroad track. At one point there was a grade crossing. Off in the distance Georg saw a train approaching, due to arrive at the critical spot just about when he and his mother, in their car did.

Instantly a burning desire possessed George to beat that train—he'd have been no autoist otherwise.

Stepping on the gas, he raced for the crossing, and swung across it with a couple of seconds to spare. At that point, "George," said his mother, "this seems reckless to me."

Her words upset him momentarily — and he stalled his car.

Well, they escaped alive, somehow, by the skin of their teeth.

George told me the story just as I've told it here, but, in conclusion parenthetically, "Of course it was my mother's fault," he said, "for speaking just when she did."

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

PLATONIC LOVE

What is platonic love? A love between members of the opposite sex "having only an intellectual interest; devoid of sympathy or passion" according to the dictionary. It was described by the Greek philosopher Plato, and is named for him. One sees this type of comradeship occasionally but it is more common that one or the other of the couple comes to care more deeply than the platonic love warrants, and spoils the friendship by wanting to possess the other. To "Worried" I would say, try going with others and see what effect it will have. Possibly your friend does not realize how much he cares, and this will wake him up.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl in my teens. I love a boy four years my senior, but I don't know whether he loves me or not. How can I tell? He goes with another girl, but when she is away he goes with me. Should I accept these dates or should I go with a boy nearer my own age? Please tell me how I can win his love.

"DOUBTFUL."

There are as many ways of winning a man's love as there are men, Doubtful. Every man likes a jolly, sympathetic companion, however. But don't try to win the boy away from the other girl, if she considers him her property, and don't accept dates with him if it will hurt her. Put yourself in her place.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am very much in love with a boy three years my senior, although he is unaware of it. He lives quite a ways from here, but comes in once a month to visit his sister. Is there any way I could make known to him that I worship him without causing him to turn against me? I am very unhappy when I do not get to see him, and my mother prohibits my conversing with him in private. Thank you.

"DESPERATE W."

Don't let him know how much you care or you will embarrass him a lot. Why not cultivate sister—for her own sake, of course?

"Dear Mrs. Lee: We are two chums who are in love with two boys who are brothers and they hardly know us. They do not live here, but one of them writes to us sometimes. Please tell us how we may win their affection.

"PATSY AND PATRICIA."

It's too intricate for me, girls. All I can say is, improve any opportunities that come your way.

Dear Little Blue Eyes, I wish I had had a chance to answer your nicely written letter before. You would be surprised at the number of little girls in their first or second year of high school who feel as you do. Go with the girls, dear, and don't you care, and I'll warrant the boys will be taking you home before long.

Peter's Adventure

Up and Off Again

"Well, after the plumes were clipped, what happened" demanded Sonny-Bunny. "I don't think losing a few feathers was very exciting. Now, if only you had watched a Two-Legs chop off an ostrich's head!"

"You do think of the most unpleasant things," twittered the Bobolinks.

"Hm," muttered Sonny-Bunny. "What did you do next?" He could say no more for his mother had clapped a soft paw over his mouth.

"Flew away from Ostrich Farm!" answered Bobolink. "You see it was very late afternoon when we arrived there, and after the race and the plume cutting and supper it was bedtime. Our guide told us that she was very sleepy — politely, of course, but still after what she said, there was nothing for us to do but to take ourselves off. So we thanked her and did. We had no notion to spend the night on Ostrich Farm. To begin with, there was no grass in which to cuddle down, and if we could have found a soft spot we should not have slept a wink, worrying for fear an ostrich might step on us."

Bobolink stopped for breath. Sonny-Bunny sat upon his haunches and clapped his little paws. "That is the most interesting story you have told us yet, Bob," cried he. "But I do wish that you had stayed over night on Ostrich Farm. Maybe something even more exciting would have happened. You might have had a narrow escape from the foot of an ostrich! Just think what an experience that would have made—why, you could have made all the feathers on your friends' backs stand up telling them about it!"

"That is all very well, you young son of a rabbit," cried Mrs. Bobolink. Bob was chuckling so hard to himself that he couldn't speak. "But suppose the foot had come down whack before we woke up! Then there would have been nothing left of us to tell the tale. How would you like to wake up some fine day and find yourself being squashed by the hoof of a horse? There would be no more lettuce patches for you. I can tell you."

At the mere idea Sonny-Bunny looked scared.

"Oh, that is different," said he. "Let's not talk about it. What did you do then Bob, after you had flown over the fence?"

"WE FLEW AND FLEW AND THOUGHT WE WOULD NEVER GET ANYWHERE"

"We flew and flew and flew!" answered Mrs. Bobolink.

"Yes," added her husband, "and I thought we would never get anywhere. There seemed to be just miles and miles and miles of bare dunes. How far Mother Ostrich must have carried we Bobolinks! To be sure the sun was setting and it was growing cooler than it had been all day, but we didn't want to put ourselves to sleep in the shifting sands. To begin with we felt that if we should sink into the shifting stuff it would slide on top of us and cover us up, and how in the world would we dig ourselves out? No sands for the bed of the Bobolinks! Grass for us if we could find any."

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

OUR SAFETY—The name of the Lord is a strong tower: the righteous runneth into it, and is safe.—Prov. 18:10.

CREATING EMPLOYMENT

The rapidly increasing use of power in industry, instead of reducing employment as too often believed, ultimately increases opportunities for employment, according to Magnus W. Alexander, President of the National Industrial Conference Board.

"It goes without saying," Mr. Magnus stated, "that a certain amount of temporary, and even permanent displacement of labor, is inevitable in the progress made in waste elimination and improved efficiency through the mechanization of industry. On the average in all manufacturing industries, 71 wage earners in 1925 produced the same volume of output as did 100 in 1914. But while the output per wage earner increased 35 per cent in volume, the total manufacturing volume in the same period increased more than 65 per cent and necessitated a large increase in the number of workers required, amounting to 1,500,000 individuals."

The present high wage scale of the American worker is directly traceable to his increased efficiency, through use of power. Its benefits are endless. Rather than causing unemployment it creates employment on a higher economic plane.

DOLLAR NOW BUYS MORE

The purchasing power of the dollar is at present higher than it has been for nearly five years, as measured by the average living cost of the American wage earner, according to the National Industrial Conference Board. Its lowest point was in July, 1920. The post-war deflation has been steadily remedied and living costs today are the least they have been since June, 1923.

This is a sure sign of prosperity. Mechanical perfection and increase of efficiency in industry has benefited the worker in two ways: It has increased his wage-earning power and decreased the price of commodities he must buy. It is estimated that today the purchasing power of an industrial worker's weekly pay is 35 per cent higher than at the outbreak of the World war.

TEN MINUTES FOR EACH BUSHEL

In 1855, three hours and three minutes were required to produce a bushel of wheat, according to the Antwerp, Ohio, Argus. Now, less than ten minutes are required, because of the utilization of the tractor and othed labor-saving machinery.

The hit-and-miss agricultural methods of an earlier day have disappeared behind the march of progress. Invention and scientific methods have resulted in an agricultural revolution, and the farmer is emerging happier, more comfortable and more prosperous.

When fortune smiles at some people they kick because she doesn't burst out laughing.

The problem now before the political managers is how to choose a president in such a way that the people will think they did it.

EGOTISM

A certain American statesman of recent years had a friend who was such a good friend that he told the statesman about his faults.

"The trouble with you," said the friend, "is that while nobody questions your ability and your brilliant attainments, you are so egotistic you are making yourself unpopular. Think this over. I am telling you as your friend."

In a few days the statesman came back. He said to his friend: "You are right. I am egotistic. I see it. I thank you. But I call your attention to the fact that most other great men have been egotistic. Look at Julius Caesar, Napoleon and all the rest."

There is a difference between having self-assurance and being hopelessly egotistic.

LEARNING BY HANDICAP

Addressing a race betterment conference some time ago, Dr. Irving Fisher, professor of political economy at Yale, said, "my studies in health arose originally from my own lack of health 30 years ago."

Theodore Roosevelt was noted for his interest in athletic affairs, and yet he was a sickly youth in college.

It is a man's handicap which often calls his attention to the extra effort which will make him a real success. Handicap demands a margin of effort—the margin of effort over what the ordinary man gives a job. Often big results come by the route of serious handicap.

The Diary of a New Yorker

By CLARK KINNAIRD

NEW YORK, June 30.—When a sight-seeing party came up from Wilkes-Barre, Pa., recently, it was considered a big story, because it was announced the New York visit was costing the excursionists only $10 each. Apparently journals believe Gotham deserves its reputation of being the most expensive city to visit. Well, it isn't. Two persons may spend two days here and have a whoopee time for $25, exclusive of railroad fare.

I am arranging a two-day $25 visit to the greatest city in the world for my cousin and his wife, of Richmond, Va. Persons in territory accessible to New York overnight, and able to spare Saturday and Sunday from home and business, can emulate their program, which I guarantee to be without a dull moment.

Of course, inexpensive visits are possible for persons living at a distance, too.

My cousin and his wife will arrive early in the morning, and go to one of numerous comfortable hotels, where two persons may obtain a room with bath for $5 a day. (They could get less pretentious quarters.) They will breakfast at an attractive restaurant, where the check for two persons of average morning appetite is $1.00. They will not be foolish about tipping. Then they will subway to City Hall square. After looking around there, they will ascend to Woolworth building to get the best and most thrilling view of New York. There is a charge for the tower trip—$1. An hour, or two hours, may be spent there. There certainly is enough to see!

After descending, they will walk down Broadway, craning their necks at the tall buildings, peeping into Maiden Lane, the great jewelry center, and Wall street and passing famous old Trinity church. Possibly they will pause in Trinity graveyard, see the tombstones of celebrated pioneer Americans, and rest amid the turmoil of the financial district. Going on down Broadway, they will gape at the Standard Oil building, Bowling Green, and enter Battery park. Unless they want to see the Aquarium, they will not pause long there, but take the Staten Island ferry. Crossing the ferry, the whole panorama of lower Manhattan will unfold itself before their eyes. They will see the Statue of Liberty, and liners going down to sea. This ferry ride is the biggest nickel's worth New York has to offer.

When they return to Battery park it will be after noon. They will take the Sixth avenue elevated get a glimpse of Greenwich Village from the air, and go to Herald square. After lunching in one of many places nearby, they will venture into the great department stores. These, undoubtedly, are among the great sights of the city, and the Missus will want to wander around in them, even if she doesn't intend to buy.

Of course, with Broadway near, they'll want to go to a show. On Saturday, attractions tack on an extra charge. Nevertheless, it won't be necessary for them to pay the exorbitant prices one hears about. By asking for balcony seats through the ticket agency at the hotel, or by visiting Leblang's, the cut-rate ticket institution at Broadway and Forty-third sreet, southeast corner,, they will be able to go to a good show for no more than $5 each, possibly for less. If they get tickets at Leblang's, they'll avoid the Saturday rush by going there—by subway—direct from Herald square, before returning to their hotel to rest.

They'll dine at one of the restaurants in Forty-third, Forty-fourth, or Forty-fifth street, near Broadway, where an excellent seven-course dinner is available for $1.25 each. They'll walk to the theatre, knowing that there's a motor jam in Broadway from 8 to 12.

After the show they may have yearnings to see some night club life, but since they've seen pictures of Texas Guinan, and haven't money to waste in buying charged apple cider as champaigne at $25 a quart, they'll gape at the lights, and go to the flea circus in 42nd street; or walk to Fifth Avenue and take a bus that will give them the opportunity of seeing Riverside Drive and the Hudson by night. They'll return by subway and be back at the hotel by 1:30 a. m.

Saturday, away from the kids and cares, they'll want to sleep late. They may, however, get up in time to go to one of New York's many interesting churches — the Little Church Around the Corner, St. Patrick's Cathedral, John Roach Straton's Calvary Baptist church, the Rockefeller - Nosdick church or to Dr. Cadman's temple, in Brooklyn. But they probably won't be out before 11. After a combined breakfast and luncheon, they'll take a bus in Fifth Avenue to Washington Square and Greenwich Village. They'll return by a bus that will take them out Fifth Avenue to 125th street, giving ample opporunity to rubberneck at the homes of the wealthy and the great. Returning, they'll stop at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, which opens at 1 p. m. on Sundays and spend an hour or two there.

They will dine at an excellent English tavern in 5th street, after they have packed and checked their bags at the hotel (in New York one has to check out before 6 p. m.). A little later in the evening they will board the train, minus headaches and purseaches.

For persons traveling alone, or for two men or for two women, many different but no more expensive programs may be arranged.

Only by using money can a child learn what money can do, and what its limitations are. In order to get this experience, he should have money over which he has complete control, beginning in early childhood with very small amounts and increasing with his developments.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

AROUND THE WORLD WITH BEAUTY

Italy.

The women of Italy have always been famous for their rich olive skins, their sleek dark hair, and their magnificent black eyes. Unfortunately, the Italian people, though they are "children of the sun," mature early, and therefore it is most necessary that the women take every possible precaution to keep their complexions and their beauty.

Their suntinted skins, warm and lovely though they are in coloring, are normally inclined toward oiliness. To counteract this condition is no so difficult an undertaking, but the Italian woman presents a real problem to the beauty scientist, for not only must the oily condition of youth be corrected, but another, quite different and more serious one avoided. In maturity, and it is an early maturity at best, a sluggishness sets in, and it is this condition which results in an unlovely swarthiness with deep-set lines and wrinkles, which nullify whatever youth remains.

The problem of the Italian woman taxed my skill to the utmost. I introduced the penetrative, blackhead and open pore washes in Rome with immediate success. But for every washing recommendation, I was particular to recommend a good active cleansing and massage cream, with stimulating properties and active stimulants to counteract advancing age.

The beauties of Italy know the natural affinity for olive skins and red lips. The golden brown skin, with a touch of color in it, to suggest the vital radiance of perfect health, is doubly lovely. They prize crushed rose leaves rouge and their lipsticks, as an artist guards his brushes, for cosmetics enhance the beauty of the sun-kissed Italian signoras. The warm, ruby red is the most popular shade of lipstick there.

In vivid contrast to their olive skins and their red lips are Italian eyes, usually a soft, romantic, lovely brown, or a flashing, piercing, beautiful black. Nowhere in the world are feminine eyes, or masculine eyes, either so expressively beautiful as they are in the native Italians.

The Latin coquette knows perfectly well, too, the lure of her eyes, and she takes delight in making them even more enchanting. She intensifies the black or the deep brown of her eyebrows with an eyebrow stick, arching them delicately; she uses mascara or eyelash cream on her long lashes, to make them curl more entrancingly, and draw attention to their superior length, and they use their lovely eyes, secure in the knowledge that the man who falls to be smitten by their beauty is blind.

It is quite evident that in our evolution we walked on all fours at one time. Some investigators believe that some of our troubles come from the fact that we have not been using the upright position long enough to adapt our organs to this position.

Going back to the habit of all fours occasionally is a very beneficial practice. It helps prolapsed organs back to place and strengthens the abdominal wall markedly. This is one of the exercises recommended to women after childbirth.

Play games with your children walking on all fours.. It is a wonderful exercise for all the muscles and joints.

We have a list of modern books on the general care and feeding of children which you may have. The column rules for obtaining material we offer are to enclose two cents in coin and a self-addressed, stamped envelope for all articles except the pamphlet on reducing and gaining; for this, ten cents in coin in addition to the self-addressed, stamped envelope are necessary.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Peters cannot diagnose nor give personal advice. Your questions, if of general interest, will be answered in the column, in turn. Requests for articles must be accompanied by a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope and two cents in coin for each article to cover cost of printing and handling. For the pamphlet on reducing and gaining, ten cents in coin with fully s. a. s. e. must be enclosed. Address Dr. Petersi n care of this paper.

Household Hints

MENU HINT

Why not simplify the night meal on warm summer days and serve a club sandwich instead of the usual meat and potatoes? It might be served on the porch or in the yard, if desired. Any good cold meat may be used in the sandwiches. For dessert, cookies and berries are a good choice, or ice cream or cake with cake or cookies.

Club Sandwich Stuffed Olives
Radishes Young Onions
Iced Tea or Coffee
Sliced Pineapple and Berries
Cookies

Today's Recipes

Club Sandwich—Sliced chicken, veal or pork are good to use, with some crisp bacon, lettuce or romaine, a few sliced tomatoes and mayonnaise on toasted bread. A little horseradish may add to its relish.

Iced Coffee—Make fresh coffee and, when cool, pour over cracked ice in tall glasses. Have plenty of ice and either plain or whipped cream to serve with it.

Suggestions

Tables, Tables

There are tables for everything nowadays. For instance, there is the davenport table, which may be placed against the wall or in front of a window. There is the end table to set beside the easy chair or at the end of the davenport; nested tables, which are a boon to the small flat, because they take up little space, as they fit one under the other, but which may be spread out for cards or tea. Then there is the low coffee table and the console table, whose place is in the hall, and the liver-shaped table or small formal table upon which calling cards are dropped. Dining tables may be small to fit the smaller quarters. Some have leaves to be raised when needed, others have buttons, which, when pressed, cause leaves to spring forth at the ends.

HOW TO KEEP BUTTER IN HOT WEATHER

A helpful suggestion as to how to keep butter firm is contained in the current issue of "Successful Farming." It reads: "When ice cannot be had butter may be kept cool in this way: Put it on a dish which has been placed in a shallow vessel of cold water and cover with an inverted new earthen flowerpot which has been scalded and left to cool. The pot should rest in the water and water should be changed from time to time. Cared for in this way, butter will keep firm even in hot weather."

Behind The Scenes in Houston, Texas

By CHARLES P. STEWART

HOUSTON, June 30. — The newspaper gang, as usual, have been the chief national convention sufferers this year.

The Republican politicians went to Kansas City and then home to rest. The Democratic politicians did the same thing by Houston. The reporters, already tuckered out at "K. C.," had to go right ahead with the long trek southward—and, b'lieve me, 'twas a hard trip.

To say that that journey's the hottest on earth doubtless will give offense at both ends of the line and all the way between.

Nevertheless, I've crossed the equator at sea level with less discomfort. Bill Davy, of Central Press, my pal, says he can't speak as to the equator with exact geographical certainty, but is prepared to back me up relative to any place in general this side of hell.

The railroad folks in Kansas City told us we couldn't get through to Houston in anything classier than a cattle car while the convention season was on. We took a chance anyway.

"Could we get a berth?" we asked the Pullman conductor after we were on board.

"Sure," said the conductor. "All you want."

Moral—if any—never pay any attention to what the higher-up traffic folks say. If they knew their stuff, maybe we wouldn't have to pay the prices on sleeping cars that we do. How the heck can they expect to make money—shooting whole trains of cars out half filled—with passengers turned away from the ticket windows on the ground that there's no more room?

"Only thing is," the conductor apologized, "I'm afraid one of you boys'll have to take an upper."

"What th' blinkety-blank-blank do we care!" I observed, intending to minimize what, in reality, was no inconvenience to either of us.

"My!" said the conductor, shocked, "what language!"

"Well," defensively interposed Bill, to whom I'd been relating reminiscenses, "you can't expect a man who has spent a year in Shanghai to be too refined."

"I spent a year in San Quentin," quoth the conductor, "and I'm more refined than that."

We hit an automobile on the road somewhere in a treeless country, as flat as a plate, where that driver must have been able to see us coming for miles.

The automobile complex is a funny thing. My friend George Britt of New York, movie press agent and a chronic autoist, told me a story once that illustrates it to a T.

It seems George was out riding with his mother one day. The road parallelled a railroad track. At one point there was a grade crossing. Off in the distance Georg saw a train approaching, due to arrive at the critical spot just about when he and his mother, in their car did.

Instantly a burning desire possessed George to beat that train—he'd have been no autoist otherwise.

Stepping on the gas, he raced for the crossing, and swung across it with a couple of seconds to spare. At that point, "George," said his mother, "this seems reckless to me."

Her words upset him momentarily — and he stalled his car.

Well, they escaped alive, somehow, by the skin of their teeth.

George told me the story just as I've told it here, but, in conclusion parenthetically. "Of course it was my mother's fault," he said, "for speaking just when she did."

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

PLATONIC LOVE

What is platonic love? A love between members of the opposite sex "having only an intellectual interest; devoid of sympathy or passion" according to the dictionary. It was described by the Greek philosopher Plato, and is named for him. One sees this type of comradeship occasionally but it is more common that one or the other of the couple comes to care more deeply than the platonic love warrants, and spoils the friendship by wanting to possess the other. To "Worried" I would say, try going with others and see what effect it will have. Possibly your friend does not realize how much he cares, and this will wake him up.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a girl in my teens. I love a boy four years my senior, but I don't know whether he loves me or not. How can I tell? He goes with another girl, but when she is away he goes with me. Should I accept these dates or should I go with a boy nearer my own age? Please tell me how I can win his love.

"DOUBTFUL."

There are as many ways of winning a man's love as there are men, Doubtful. Every man likes a jolly, sympathetic companion, however. But don't try to win the boy away from the other girl, if she considers him her property, and don't accept dates with him if it will hurt her. Put yourself in her place.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am very much in love with a boy three years my senior, although he is unaware of it. He lives quite a ways from here, but comes in once a month to visit his sister. Is there any way I could make known to him that I worship him without causing him to turn against me? I am very unhappy when I do not get to see him, and my mother prohibits my conversing with him in private. Thank you.

"DESPERATE W."

Don't let him know how much you care or you will embarrass him a lot. Why not cultivate sister—for her own sake, of course?

"Dear Mrs. Lee: We are two chums who are in love with two boys who are brothers and they hardly know us. They do not live here, but one of them writes to us sometimes. Please tell us how we may win their affection.

"PATSY AND PATRICIA."

It's too intricate for me, girls. All I can say is, improve any opportunities that come your way.

Dear Little Blue Eyes, I wish I had had a chance to answer your nicely written letter before. You would be surprised at the number of little girls in their first or second year of high school who feel as you do. Go with the girls, dear, and don't you care, and I'll warrant the boys will be taking you home before long.

Peter's Adventure

Up and Off Again

"Well, after the plumes were clipped, what happened" demanded Sonny-Bunny. "I don't think losing a few feathers was very exciting. Now, if only you had watched a Two-Legs chop off an ostrich's head!"

"You do think of the most unpleasant things," twittered the Bobolinks.

"Hm," muttered Sonny-Bunny. "What did you do next?" He could say no more for his mother had clapped a soft paw over his mouth.

"Flew away from Ostrich Farm!" answered Bobolink. "You see it was very late afternoon when we arrived there, and after the race and the plume cutting and supper it was bedtime. Our guide told us that she was very sleepy — politely, of course, but still after what she said, there was nothing for us to do but to take ourselves off. So we thanked her and did. We had no notion to spend the night on Ostrich Farm. To begin with, there was no grass in which to cuddle down, and if we could have found a soft spot we should not have slept a wink, worrying for fear an ostrich might step on us."

Bobolink stopped for breath. Sonny-Bunny sat upon his haunches and clapped his little paws. "That is the most interesting story you have told us yet, Bob," cried he. "But I do wish that you had stayed over night on Ostrich Farm. Maybe something even more exciting would have happened. You might have had a narrow escape from the foot of an ostrich! Just think what an experience that would have made—why, you could have made all the feathers on your friends' backs stand up telling them about it!"

"That is all very well, you young son of a rabbit," cried Mrs. Bobolink. Bob was chuckling so hard to himself that he couldn't speak. "But suppose the foot had come down whack before we woke up! Then there would have been nothing left of us to tell the tale. How would you like to wake up some fine day and find yourself being squashed by the hoof of a horse? There would be no more lettuce patches for you, I can tell you."

At the mere idea Sonny-Bunny looked scared.

"Oh, that is different," said he. "Let's not talk about it. What did you do then Bob, after you had flown over the fence?"

"WE FLEW AND FLEW AND THOUGHT WE WOULD NEVER GET ANYWHERE"

"We flew and flew and flew!" answered Mrs. Bobolink.

"Yes," added her husband, "and I thought we would never get anywhere. There seemed to be just miles and miles and miles of bare dunes. How far Mother Ostrich must have carried we Bobolinks! To be sure the sun was setting and it was growing cooler than it had been all day, but we didn't want to put ourselves to sleep in the shifting sands. To begin with we felt that if we should sink into the shifting stuff it would slide on top of us and cover us up, and how in the world would we dig ourselves out? No sands for the bed of the Bobolinks! Grass for us if we could find any."

HARNESS CIGARS PLAY WELL TO DEFEAT CENTRAL HIGH FRIDAY

Masterful pitching and good fielding, coupled with timely hitting gave the Harness Cigars a close 4 to 3 decision over Central High School in a National League Softball game at Cox Memorial Athletic Field Friday night.

The contest, by far the fastest and probably the best of the season, developed into a pitcher's battle between Paul Boxwell, Harness hurler, and Doak, Central moundsman, with honors about evenly divided.

With a stiff wind at their back, the rival pitchers were enabled to put more speed on the ball and at the same time the batters saw frequently converted into easy outs what under ordinary circumstances would go for clean hits.

The victory placed the Harness Cigars in a two-way tie for second place while Central neither bettered its position or dropped in the league standing.

Central strengthened its reputation for being the champion "hard luck" team of the circuit, losing its third decision by a one-run margin since the season started, two to Harness and one to the Downtown Country Club.

The few fielding mistakes that were made contributed to the scoring on both sides.

Harness jumped into the lead by scoring two runs in the second inning. Central, after being blanked for five rounds, broke through to tally once in the sixth. Harness won the game in the eighth with another two-run rally. Central High came back to push across two runs in its half of the eighth but the raly fell short.

The game, easily the shortest of the season, took only forty minutes to complete.

Both Doak and Boxwell turned into hurling masterpieces.

Harness lineup: Shaw, lf; F. Smith, 3b; Seall, 2b; Gegner, rf; Bottorff, ss; Cain, 1b; A. Boxwell, cf; Leopard, c; P. Boxwell, p.

Score by innings:

Harness	----	0	2	0	0	0	0	2	0	—4
Central	----	0	0	0	0	0	1	0	2	0—3

Umpires—Boxwell at plate; McCurran on bases.

REDS ADVANCE WITH VICTORY OVER CUBS AND CHARLEY ROOT

By LES CONKLIN
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, June 30—New York and Brooklyn are having a tough time trying to gain ground on the St. Louis Cardinals, National League pace-setters. The Giants have won five straight games and the Dodgers have copped six in a row, but the Cards have captured seven of their last nine starts and lead the second-place Giants by five games.

The Cardinals are making every hit count, they were outbatted by Pittsburgh yesterday but scored nine runs on eleven hits and knocked Ray Kremer out of the box. The Pirates collected thirteen hits but couldn't score on the veteran Clarence Mitchell until the last inning when Paul Waner smacked a homer with the bases full.

The Reds took fourth place away from the Cubs by beating them 4 to 2. Critz got four hits and Pitcher Charley Root took his sixth straight beating.

Herb Pennock, veteran Southpaw, appears to be the only member of the old guard of the Yankees who is slipping. He was trounced by the Athletics yesterday, 6 to 4, thanks to an inglorious muff by Bob Meusel, and has lost four of his last five starts.

The Yankees will play no more games in Shibe Park this season, and the Mackmen were only too glad to bid them farewell. The A's won only two out of eleven games with the champions in Philly.

A three-run rally in the ninth staked Cleveland to a 9 to 8 victory over the White Sox. George Grant was batted out in the last inning but was credited with his seventh straight win.

Other teams were idle.

RESERVES WILL BE ACTIVE SUNDAY IF WEATHER PERMITS

With co-operation upon the part of the weather man, the Reserves hope to resume operations in a return engagement with the A. I. U. baseball team of Springfield Sunday afternoon at Washington Park.

The nine-game winning streak of the local nine remains intact as last Sunday's game was called off on account of a drenching rain.

As a result the team batting average remained stationary at .306. Reserves have been to bat 313 times, scored eighty-one runs and made ninety-six hits.

Conley is the leading batter with a mark of .451. He also leads in runs scored with thirteen. Johnson, runnerup for batting honors and runs scored, has made the most hits, fifteen.

Reserves, in nine games are accredited with twenty-three stolen bases, seven sacrifice hits, twenty doubles, seven triples and seven home runs.

Durnbaugh leads the base stealers with five to his credit and in home runs with three circuit clouts. Barlow has made the most sacrifices, three and the most doubles, six. Conley and Durnbaugh are tied in the department of triples, each having made two.

FAIRFIELD FLYER COMMENDED BY HEAD

Master Sergeant William J. Bennett, army air corps, Fairfield, was commended by Maj. Gen. James E. Fechet, chief of the army air corps, Friday, for courage in the recent national elimination balloon race.

Bennett, a pilot on the "Sun-Telegraph - Pittsburgher" balloon, with Walter Chambers, aviation editor of the Sun-Telegraph, offered to sacrifice himself to save Chambers when the balloon encountered a severe storm and was hurdled down 7,000 feet to near the ground.

In a letter to General Fechet, Chambers said, "I hope you can cite him to his commanding officer for the unexampled bravery and unselfishness with which he faced what everyone now deems was the almost certainty of death."

ATTORNEY'S AUTO FORCED FROM ROAD

Attorney F. L. Johnson escaped with minor bruises when his automobile was crowded off the road near West Jefferson while he was enroute to the Republican State Convention, at Columbus, Thursday.

A truck, coming in the opposite direction, skidded in front of the Johnson car, and forced the local auto in the ditch. The latter car was badly damaged.

Mr. Johnson continued to Columbus and the machine was brought to Xenia for repairs.

RAINY WEEK DELAYS GAMES IN SOFT BALL LEAGUES; THREE HELD

Rain, and then some more rain slowed up the competition in the National and American Softball Leagues during the last week, and the three games played despite the showers failed to materially change the status of the standing in either circuit.

The Firemen continue to set the pace in the National League with six victories against one defeat, half a game ahead of the Downtown Country Club and Harness Cigars, which are tied for second place.

In the American League the Lang Chevrolet Co. holds a half-game advantage over the Hudson-Essex nine. The two leaders were scheduled to meet last Tuesday night and the Hudson-Essex may be declared winner by forfeit as the opposition failed to appear, thinking an all-day rain would make the field too wet. The diamond, however, was said to be in good condition.

In the only American League game played, the rejuvenated Carroll-Binder Co. rose to third place by defeating Rotary.

Schedule next week: Monday—Kiwanis vs. Carroll-Binder Co.; Tuesday—Rotary vs. Hudson-Essex; Wednesday—No game; Thursday—D. T. C. Club vs. Harness Cigars; Friday—Phi Delts vs. Central High.

Standing in the National League:

Ritticisms

BY BILL RITT

For the last seventeen years National league batters have looked pretty sick. The name of the poison is Grover Cleveland Alexander.

Alex broke into the big time as a member of the Phillies. Despite the handicap he's made good, so it should be held against him.

* * *

Back in 1911 Alex had a swell curve. He's still got it, only it's sweller.

With Alex on the team all the rookie pitchers have to do is keep sitting on the bench and watch their beards grow.

Some of the boys he's fanning today saw him in his first world series. But they had to skip kindergarten to do it.

* * *

Back in 1915 the Phillies won a pennant. They had a good team then—Alex and eight other fellows.

* * *

It is doubtful if the National league will ever have another pitcher to equal Alexander's record. They usually don't live that long.

Bowling

The Fords and Xenia Shoes were victorious over the Western Southern Life Insurance Co. and General Motors teams, respectively, in the opening round matches in the newly-organized four-team Duck Pin League during the last week.

The Fords defeated the insurance team two out of three games and the Xenia Shoes did likewise against General Motors.

Duck pins are an offshoot of bowling and the sport has met with extreme popularity during the warm summer months in other cities.

This is the first league of its kind ever organized in Xenia and will function until the fall bowling season starts next September 1.

Two matches will be played every week on Tuesday and Thursday nights.

According to next week's schedule, the insurance team will play General Motors Tuesday night and the Xenia Shoes will meet the Fords Thursday night.

HARNESS CIGARS PLAY WELL TO DEFEAT CENTRAL HIGH FRIDAY

Masterful pitching and good fielding, coupled with timely hitting gave the Harness Cigars a close 4 to 3 decision over Central High School in a National League Softball game at Cox Memorial Athletic Field Friday night.

The contest, by far the fastest and probably the best of the season, developed into a pitcher's battle between Paul Boxwell, Harness hurler, and Doak, Central moundsman, with honors about evenly divided.

With a stiff wind at their back, the rival pitchers were enabled to put more speed on the ball and at the same time the batters saw frequently converted into easy outs what under ordinary circumstances would go for clean hits.

The victory placed the Harness Cigars in a two-way tie for second place while Central neither bettered its position or dropped in the league standing.

Central strengthened its reputation for being the champion "hard luck" team of the circuit, losing its third decision by a one-run margin since the season started, two to Harness and one to the Downtown Country Club.

The few fielding mistakes that were made contributed to the scoring on both sides.

Harness jumped into the lead by scoring two runs in the second inning. Central, after being blanked for five rounds, broke through to tally once in the sixth. Harness won the game in the eighth with another two-run rally. Central High came back to push across two runs in its half of the eighth but the raly fell short.

The game, easily the shortest of the season, took only forty minutes to complete.

Both Doak and Boxwell turned into hurling masterpieces.

Harness lineup: Shaw, lf; F. Smith, 3b; Seall, 2b; Gegner, rf; Bottorff, ss; Cain, 1b; A. Boxwell, cf; Leopard, c; P. Boxwell, p.

Score by innings:

Harness	0	2	0	0	0	0	0	2	0	—4

By LES CONKLIN
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, June 30—New York and Brooklyn are having a tough time trying to gain ground on the St. Louis Cardinals, National League pace-setters. The Giants have won five straight games and the Dodgers have copped six in a row, but the Cards have captured seven of their last nine starts and lead the second-place Giants by five games.

The Cardinals are making every hit count, they were outbatted by Pittsburgh yesterday but scored nine runs on eleven hits and knocked Ray Kremer out of the box. The Pirates collected thirteen hits but couldn't score on the veteran Clarence Mitchell until the last inning when Paul Waner smacked a homer with the bases full.

The Reds took fourth place away from the Cubs by beating them 4 to 2. Critz got four hits and Pitcher Charley Root took his sixth straight beating.

Herb Pennock, veteran Southpaw, appears to be the only member of the old guard of the Yankees who is slipping. He was trounced by the Athletics yesterday, 6 to 4, thanks to an inglorious muff by Bob Meusel, and has lost four of his last five starts.

The Yankees will play no more games in Shibe Park this season, and the Mackmen were only too glad to bid them farewell. The A's won only two out of eleven games with the champions in Philly.

A three-run rally in the ninth staked Cleveland to a 9 to 8 victory over the White Sox. George Grant was batted out in the last inning but was credited with his seventh straight win.

Other teams were idle.

RESERVES WILL BE ACTIVE SUNDAY IF WEATHER PERMITS

With co-operation upon the part of the weather man, the Reserves hope to resume operations in a return engagement with the A. I. U. baseball team of Springfield Sunday afternoon at Washington Park.

The nine-game winning streak of the local nine remains intact as last Sunday's game was called off on account of a drenching rain.

As a result the team batting average remained stationary at .306. Reserves have been to bat 313 times, scored eighty-one runs and made ninety-six hits.

Conley is the leading batter with a mark of .451. He also leads in runs scored with thirteen, Johnson, runnerup for batting honors and runs scored, has made the most hits, fifteen.

Reserves, in nine games are accredited with twenty-three stolen bases, seven sacrifice hits, twenty doubles, seven triples and seven home runs.

Durnbaugh leads the base stealers with five to his credit and in home runs with three circuit clouts. Barlow has made the most sacrifices, three and the most doubles, six. Conley and Durnbaugh are tied in the department of triples, each having made two.

FAIRFIELD FLYER COMMENDED BY HEAD

Master Sergeant William J. Bennett, army air corps, Fairfield, was commended by Maj. Gen. James E. Fechet, chief of the army air corps, Friday, for courage in the recent national elimination balloon race.

Bennett, a pilot on the "Sun-Telegraph - Pittsburgher" balloon, with Walter Chambers, aviation editor of the Sun-Telegraph, offered to sacrifice himself to save Chambers when the balloon encountered a severe storm and was hurdled down 7,000 feet to near the ground.

In a letter to General Fechet, Chambers said, "I hope you can cite him to his commanding officer for the unexampled bravery and unselfishness with which he faced what everyone now deems was the almost certainty of death."

ATTORNEY'S AUTO FORCED FROM ROAD

Attorney F. L. Johnson escaped with minor bruises when his automobile was crowded off the road near West Jefferson while he was enroute to the Republican State Convention, at Columbus, Thursday.

A truck, coming in the opposite direction, skidded in front of the Johnson car, and forced the local auto in the ditch. The latter car was badly damaged.

Mr. Johnson continued to Columbus and the machine was brought to Xenia for repairs.

RAINY WEEK DELAYS GAMES IN SOFT BALL LEAGUES; THREE HELD

Rain, and then some more rain slowed up the competition in the National and American Softball Leagues during the last week, and the three games played despite the showers failed to materially change the status of the standing in either circuit.

The Firemen continue to set the pace in the National League with six victories against one defeat, half a game ahead of the Downtown Country Club and Harness Cigars, which are tied for second place.

In the American League the Lang Chevrolet Co. holds a half-game advantage over the Hudson-Essex nine. The two leaders were scheduled to meet last Tuesday night and the Hudson-Essex may be declared winner by forfeit as the opposition failed to appear, thinking an all-day rain would make the field too wet. The diamond, however, was said to be in good condition.

In the only American League game played, the rejuvenated Carroll-Binder Co. rose to third place by defeating Rotary.

Schedule next week: Monday—Kiwanis vs. Carroll-Binder Co.; Tuesday—Rotary vs. Hudson-Essex; Wednesday—No game; Thursday—D. T. C. Club vs. Harness Cigars; Friday—Phi Delts vs. Central High.

Standing in the National League:

Team	W.	L.	Pct.
Firemen	5	1	.857
D. T. C. Club	5	1	.833

Ritticisms
BY BILL RITT

For the last seventeen years National league batters have looked pretty sick. The name of the poison is Grover Cleveland Alexander.

* * *

Alex broke into the big time as a member of the Phillies. Despite the handicap he's made good, so it should be held against him.

* * *

Back in 1911 Alex had a swell curve. He's still got it, only it's sweller.

With Alex on the team all the rookie pitchers have to do is keep sitting on the bench and watch their beards grow.

Some of the boys he's fanning today saw him in his first world series. But they had to skip kindergarten to do it.

* * *

Back in 1915 the Phillies won a pennant. They had a good team then—Alex and eight other fellows.

* * *

It is doubtful if the National league will ever have another pitcher to equal Alexander's record. They usually don't live that long.

Bowling

The Fords and Xenia Shoes were victorious over the Western Southern Life Insurance Co. and General Motors teams, respectively, in the opening round matches in the newly-organized four-team Duck Pin League during the last week.

The Fords defeated the insurance team two out of three games and the Xenia Shoes did likewise against General Motors.

Duck pins are an offshoot of bowling and the sport has met with extreme popularity during the warm summer months in other cities.

This is the first league of its kind ever organized in Xenia and will function until the fall bowling season starts next September 1.

Two matches will be played every week on Tuesday and Thursday nights.

According to next week's schedule, the insurance team will play General Motors Tuesday night and the Xenia Shoes will meet the Fords Thursday night.

TEN ACRES OF BLACKBERRIES

Berries are big, cultivated, coreless, juicy, tempting, sugary morsels. Perfect dessert, jam, pie and canning berries. Customers said, "My, one and one half bushel lost only one quart in canning. Delicious jam. Kept part of berries five days before finished canning and last just as nice as first canned. Why, wild berries begin to break down and juice run out and fill with sour germs as soon as picked and your cultivated berries hardly stain the container, yet are so tender and sweet. I see now why so many of my wild berries canned, pop up. Your cultivated berries reheated slightly when can is opened with a slight sprinkling of sugar, added have that fresh from the patch flavor so pleasing and attractive to the taste. Did not know that there was so much difference between wild and your cultivated blackberries. Will never put up another wild berry."

If you do not know the superior qualities and real economy in canning cultivated blackberries order one half of your 1928 supply WOODMANSEE'S blackberries and be convinced. Order early as my orders last season ran nine days ahead of production and already I have had five times as many folks speak this year for their berries as last year.

PRICES UNIFORM ALL SEASON

24 quart crate or one bushel or over 15c per quart delivered. Any quantity 13c per quart at patch. Pick them yourself 10c per quart. Phone 370 Highland or write your orders in early July delivery. LEAVE HOUSTON LOT HAPPIER THAN WHEN CONVENTION BEGAN

bitory laws in its first paragraph, and concluded by pledging nominees of the party to "an honest effort to enforce the eighteenth amendment and all other provisions of the federal constitution and all laws enacted pursuant thereto."

This was entirely satisfactory to the radical drys, including such outstanding officials of the anti-saloon league as Bishop James Cannon, Jr., who was here to look after just such matters. That is, it was pleasing to them until Governor Smith accepted the nomination given him with the blunt announcement that, while he stood for law enforcement and would honestly try to enforce the prohibitory laws, he nevertheless believed them wrong and hoped to evolve something better than the present system, which, he said, "is entirely unsatisfactory to the great mass of our people."

It was after reviewing this statement of Governor Smith's that F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League declared:

"Governor Smith assumes the leadership in the wet program to modify the prohibition laws, and it is a challenge to constitutional government."

Both the major political parties, McBride said, went on record in behalf of vigorous and effective enforcement of the prohibition amendment, for both pledged enforcement, and both mentioned the eighteenth amendment by name.

"This," continued McBride, "makes the issues one of candidates".

And after asserting that the league viewed Governor Smith's nomination with "disappointment", he went on to predict:

"The dry forces will meet the challenge Governor Smith presents in his telegram to the convention."

All of which controversy moved a cynic veteran of many conventions to observe today:

"It is as expected. The dry Democrats in the South can point to the platform with a clear conscience and vote for Al Smith. The wets can point to his telegram to the convention, and vote for him, too—in hopes."

The drys professed to view Governor Smith's telegram to the convention, asserting that he stood for modification of the present laws, with great tripdation and concern. Yet they are forced to admit that they had ample warning of it. Five days before the delegates met in Sam Houghton's big pine tabernacle, Governor Smith asserted unequivocally that he stood for a change in the prohibitory laws.

This was in reply to a question propounded to him on Norman E. Mack's statement that he (Smith) always had and always would stand for liberalization of the liquor laws.

When this statement was made, the Tammany people were greatly concerned. They thought the veteran Democratic leader from New York had made a great tactical blunder. They wildly telegraphed to Governor Smith and long-distanced him about the statement and all they got for their pains was the statement that Governor Smith had not changed in any degree his views on the necessity of revising the present prohibitory laws.

This statement by the governor was given wide publicity.

And in spite of it the convention went ahead and nominated him.

Therefore, the Smith supporters said today, the convention did not "buy any pig in a poke" when it nominated the New York governor. It knew exactly where he stood on the controversial issue of prohibition—he believes the laws should be changed, and he said as much in his telegram to the convention.

The prevailing opinion among the professional politicians is that the Democrats played "smart politics" in Houston. They adopted a platform that placated the drys to the extent that for the first time in nearly half a century a minority report was not brought against it. At the same time, they nominated for the presidency an admitted and self-confessed wet who favors modification of the present laws.

All of which makes prohibition an issue in the present campaign, despite all claims to the contrary. The radical drys may vote against Smith because of his blunt honesty, but the hopelessly Democratic drys in the south can vote for him too, with one eye on the platform.

Annulment Spiked

Rumors which were abroad regarding Queen Victoria of Spain, above, were effectually killed by the Vatican. It was rumored that King Alfonso was seeking an annulment, but the Vatican authorities decreed that the marriage of sovereigns was surrounded by such well known guarantees that it was almost impossible to find faults which would make annulment feasible.

RESTLESS LOVE

RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Ackland Center, a little old town in New England, is proud of its beauty and traditions. But the modern world crowds in on its peace and quiet. Finally a notorious roadhouse, Jazzland, is opened by a gang of bootleggers. Liquor flows. Girls of the town are lured there. The editor of the "Weekly Age" is murdered for his editorial attacks. His brother, Homer Pew, takes up the fight. Homer is joined by Stella Bagot, one of the home-town girls, who has made good as a writer in New York. Stella comes to write a story, and remains to fight Jazzland. Homer is beaten up in a mysterious midnight attack. Stella takes charge of the paper and writes sizzling editorials. She also tries to trace a telephone call, believing it to come from the murderers. Stella finds her little sister, Martha, has been out on a lark to Jazzland, and has been drinking. She gives her a lecture and Martha complains that she is kept at home while Stella has been allowed to go to college and later take up her own life in New York. Stella retires to her room, and leaves a note pinned on her door telling her mother to awaken her early the next morning.

Stella has made an appointment to phone Ernie Hallam, a New York admirer, who is staying in Boston.

Erie complains that Stella has forgotten him, but she makes a date to meet him in a little town nearby that night at six-thirty. Ernie is very much in love with Stella.

Stella finds out Joe Harmer, Ackland's leading citizen and political boss, has had a hand in leasing Jazzland to the gang.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XXII

Before he could break out again, Stella sprang up and laid an impulsive hand on his arm. "Homer," she said gently, "you mustn't think I don't understand what you're going through. You wouldn't be human if you didn't blow up now and then. But we're in a difficult situation, and we've simply got to be patient and cautious. If you were to launch a premature attack on Joe Harmer, while a good many people would sympathize with you personally because of all you've gone through, still the town, as a whole, would simply measure you up against him. No matter what facts we might dig up. Measure you, man for man. And you'd lose. Isn't that about it, Mr. Wilbraham?"

Homer strode to the window. "It's a filthy world!" he muttered.

The detective rose. "I must be going along. There are a good many other angles to the case. Some of them rather more important than this ..... Mr. Pew, I'm going to make a request of you. There is a possibility that we may find out something more about Mr. Harmer. Suppose, for example, that they've drawn him in a little deeper than we suspect now. They could. It is quite within the range of possibility that he may know something about the murder and about this attack on you. My private opinion, at the moment, is that they're making him sweat. Don't misunderstand me. I really don't believe he is personally involved in the criminal aspect of the case. But it is possible that he has some guilty knowledge..... I am going to ask you, for the present, to spare him from attacks in the Age. Keep after Jazzland. That's all right. But don't bring Harmer into it."

"In God's name, why not!" It was a cry of anguish.

"For the simple reason that he is living in terror of exposure. That is the only hold the Jazzland people have on him. It is also our only hold on him. When a man gets drawn into that sort of nervous fear he loses his perspective. This man has lost sight of his own real strength. I think he is in something of a panic. But people aren't going to let him suffer. It's just as Miss Bagot says. The political crowd, like the townspeople here, will cover up a lot to protect Joe Harmer. Once let him feel that wave of sympathy rising and he'd realize his strength. Get his vision back. And then he'd be too strong for us. All his friends would demand proof, and I tell you we haven't got it. First thing I know I'd be called off the case. And I don't choose to be called off. I want to stick. No, our hope, so far as he is concerned, is to leave him, for the present, in his panic.

Stella, wholly forgetful of self now, went again to Homer and again took his arm. "He's right," she said pleadingly. "You see that, don't you, Homer? He's right."

"But I'm planning to put up a fight for a special town meeting," said Homer. "How about that?"

"All right." Wilbraham replied. "Fight Jazzland all you want. Just don't go after Harmer."

Homer stared out the window. He was thinking of Ham, and a little of his own battered head; and a circumspect town in which respect for property was rooted deep, deep.

"Why did he try to buy the paper?" he cried out, more than ever like a bewildered boy.

Wilbraham, standing near the door, was studying the couple by the window. Stella didn't know that she was tihtly holding that boyishly resistant arm.

Wilbraham spoke. "For his own protection, Mr. Pew. His position is plain enough. He doesn't like Jazzland any more than you do. He's wishing he'd never touched it. But he can't let go. All he wants is to quiet things down, get as much of his money back as he can, and then as soon as he's free of Horwitz and Neddick, close the place up. You see, as it stands now, he's afraid even to hand them back the notes. They'd be unpleasant bits of paper for Horwitz and Neddick to have about the place. Even if he destroyed the notes, these men wouldn't let go. You may be sure they're holding him just as tight as they possibly can. Your Mr. Harmer is out on a limb, waiting for a nice quiet opportunity to crawl back to some safer position. But there won't be any quiet as long as you're hammering away at Jazzland."

"I'll hammer, all right," said Homer. "I'll hammer."

Wilbraham gave Stella a look that said: "Take care of him. Steady him." Then went quietly out.

* * *

"Homer, you simply must try to look at this situation rationally!"

"You really agree with Wilbraham, Stella? About Joe Harmer?"

"I do, Homer. It's so clear. He's the biggest personality in town.. People aren't going to change their opinion of him over night, just because you ask them to. They believe in him, and the blunt truth is, they don't believe in you."

Homer started; bit his lip. "No," said he, "they don't. They don't."

"Oh, they're sorry enough. They have got feelings. But they're not excitable people, you know. Not our Ackland folks. They're steady and patient and inclined to wait things out. They mistrusted your brother's judgment. They mistrust yours still more."

"Yes, I suppose they do."

"It's the truth, Homer. They feel that you're embarrassing Mr. Harmer in this Jazzland matter by forcing his hand. Their way would be just to leave it to him, and the police. They're a practical lot, you know. They're not much on crusades."

The boy—he seemed now no more than a boy—was cought in a slight convulsive shiver. "But Ham was murdered!"

"Come over here," she said, and led him, still resistant, to the couch. "You lie right down and try to get hold of yourself. You're carrying altogether too much of a burden to waste enregy in brainstorms."

(To Be Continued)

"Come over here," she said.

TEN ACRES OF BLACKBERRIES

Berries are big, cultivated, coreless, juicy, tempting, sugary morsels. Perfect dessert, jam, pie and canning berries. Customers said, "My, one and one half bushel lost only one quart in canning. Delicious jam. Kept part of berries five days before finished canning and last just as nice as first canned. Why, wild berries begin to break down and juice run out and fill with sour germs as soon as picked and your cultivated berries hardly stain the container, yet are so tender and sweet. I see now why so many of my wild berries canned, pop up. Your cultivated berries reheated slightly when can is opened with a slight sprinkling of sugar, added have that fresh from the patch flavor so pleasing and attractive to the taste. Did not know that there was so much difference between wild and your cultivated blackberries. Will never put up another wild berry."

If you do not know the superior qualities and real economy in canning cultivated blackberries order one half of your 1928 supply WOODMANSEE'S blackberries and be convinced. Order early as my orders last season ran nine days ahead of production and already I have had five times as many folks speak this year for their berries as last year.

PRICES UNIFORM ALL SEASON

LEAVE HOUSTON LOT HAPPIER THAN WHEN CONVENTION BEGAN

bitory laws in its first paragraph, and concluded by pledging nominees of the party to "an honest effort to enforce the eighteenth amendment and all other provisions of the federal constitution and all laws enacted pursuant thereto."

This was entirely satisfactory to the radical drys, including such outstanding officials of the anti-saloon league as Bishop James Cannon, Jr., who was here to look after just such matters. That is, it was pleasing to them until Governor Smith accepted the nomination given him with the blunt announcement that, while he stood for law enforcement and would honestly try to enforce the prohibitory laws, he nevertheless believes them wrong and hoped to evolve something better than the present system, which, he said, "is entirely unsatisfactory to the great mass of our people."

It was after reviewing this statement of Governor Smith's that F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League declared:

"Governor Smith assumes the leadership in the wet program to modify the prohibition laws, and it is a challenge to constitutional government."

Both the major political parties, McBride said, went on record in behalf of vigorous and effective enforcement of the prohibition amendment, for both pledged enforcement, and both mentioned the eighteenth amendment by name.

"This," continued McBride, "makes the issues one of candidates".

And after asserting that the league viewed Governor Smith's nomination with "disappointment", he went on to predict:

"The dry forces will meet the challenge Governor Smith presents in his telegram to the convention."

All of which controversy moved a cynic veteran of many conventions to observe today:

"It is as expected. The dry Democrats in the South can point to the platform with a clear conscience and vote for Al Smith. The wets can point to his telegram to the convention, and vote for him, too—in hopes."

The drys professed to view Governor Smith's telegram to the convention, asserting that he stood for modification of the present laws, with great tripdation and concern. Yet they are forced to admit that they had ample warning of it. Five days before the delegates met in Sam Houghton's big pine tabernacle, Governor Smith asserted unequivocally that he stood for a change in the prohibitory laws.

This was in reply to a question propounded to him on Norman E. Mack's statement that he (Smith) always had and always would stand for liberalization of the liquor laws.

When this statement was made, the Tammany people were greatly concerned. They thought the veteran Democratic leader from New York had made a great tactical blunder. They wildly telegraphed to Governor Smith and long-distanced him about the statement and all they got for their pains was the statement that Governor Smith had not changed in any degree his views on the necessity of revising the present prohibitory laws.

This statement by the governor was given wide publicity.

And in spite of it the convention went ahead and nominated him.

Therefore, the Smith supporters said today, the convention did not "buy any pig in a poke" when it nominated the New York governor. It knew exactly where he stood on the controversial issue of prohibition—he believes the laws should be changed, and he said as much in his telegram to the convention.

The prevailing opinion among the professional politicians is that the Democrats played "smart politics" in Houston. They adopted a platform that placated the drys to the extent that for the first time in nearly half a century a minority report was not brought against it. At the same time, they nominated for the presidency an admitted and self-confessed wet who favors modification of the present laws.

All of which makes prohibition an issue in the present campaign, despite all claims to the contrary. The radical drys may vote against Smith because of his blunt honesty, but the hopelessly Democratic drys in the south can vote for him too, with one eye on the platform.

Annulment Spiked

Rumors which were abroad regarding Queen Victoria of Spain, above, were effectually killed by the Vatican. It was rumored that King Alfonso was seeking an annulment, but the Vatican authorities decreed that the marriage of sovereigns was surrounded by such well known guarantees that it was almost impossible to find faults which would make annulment feasible.

READ THIS FIRST:

Ackland Center, a little old town in New England, is proud of its beauty and traditions. But the modern world crowds in on its peace and quiet. Finally a notorious roadhouse, Jazzland, is opened by a gang of bootleggers. Liquor flows, Girls of the town are lured there. The editor of the "Weekly Age" is murdered for his editorial attacks. His brother, Homer Pew, takes up the fight. Homer is joined by Stella Bagot, one of the home-town girls, who has made good as a writer in New York. Stella comes to write a story, and remains to fight Jazzland. Homer is beaten up in a mysterious midnight attack. Stella takes charge of the paper and writes sizzling editorials. She also tries to trace a telephone call, believing it to come from the murderers. Stella finds her little sister, Martha, has been out on a lark to Jazzland, and has been drinking. She gives her a lecture and Martha complains that she is kept at home while Stella has been allowed to go to college and later take up her own life in New York. Stella retires to her room, and leaves a note pinned on her door telling her mother to awaken her early the next morning.

Stella has made an appointment to phone Ernie Hallam, a New York admirer, who is staying in Boston.

Erie complains that Stella has forgotten him, but she makes a date to meet him in a little town nearby that night at six-thirty. Ernie is very much in love with Stella.

Stella finds out Joe Harmer, Ackland's leading citizen and political boss, has had a hand in leasing Jazzland to the gang.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XXII

Before he could break out again, Stella sprang up and laid an impulsive hand on his arm. "Homer," she said gently, "you mustn't think I don't understand what you're going through. You wouldn't be human if you didn't blow up now and then. But we're in a difficult situation, and we've simply got to be patient and cautious. If you were to launch a premature attack on Joe Harmer, while a good many people would sympathize with you personally because of all you've gone through, still the town, as a whole, would simply measure you up against him. No matter what facts we might dig up. Measure you, man for man. And you'd lose. Isn't that about it, Mr. Wilbraham?"

Homer strode to the window. "It's a filthy world!" he muttered.

The detective rose. "I must be going along. There are a good many other angles to the case. Some of them rather more important than this. ..... Mr. Pew, I'm going to make a request of you. There is a possibility that we may find out something more about Mr. Harmer. Suppose, for example, that they've drawn him in a little deeper than we suspect now. They could. It is quite within the range of possibility that he may know something about the murder and about this attack on you. My private opinion, at the moment, is that they're making him sweat. Don't misunderstand me. I really don't believe he is personally involved in the criminal aspect of the case. But it is possible that he has some guilty knowledge. ..... I am going to ask you, for the present, to spare him from attacks in the Age. Keep after Jazzland. That's all right. But don't bring Harmer into it."

"In God's name, why not?" It was a cry of anguish.

"For the simple reason that he is living in terror of exposure. That is the only hold the Jazzland people have on him. It is also our only hold on him. When a man gets drawn into that sort of nervous fear he loses his perspective. This man has lost sight of his own real strength. I think he is in something of a panic. But people aren't going to let him suffer. It's just as Miss Bagot says. The political crowd, like the townspeople here, will cover up a lot to protect Joe Harmer. Once let him feel that wave of sympathy rising and he'd realize his strength. Get his vision back. And then he'd be too strong for us. All his friends would demand proof, and I tell you we haven't got it. First thing I know I'd be called off the case. And I don't choose to be called off. I want to stick. No, our hope, so far as he is concerned, is to leave him, for the present, in his panic.

Stella, wholly forgetful of self now, went again to Homer and again took his arm. "He's right," she said pleadingly. "You see that, don't you, Homer? He's right."

"But I'm planning to put up a fight for a special town meeting," said Homer. "How about that?"

"All right," Wilbraham replied. "Fight Jazzland all you want. Just don't go after Harmer."

Homer stared out the window. He was thinking of Ham, and a little of his own battered head; and a circumspect town in which respect for property was rooted deep, deep.

"Why did he try to buy the paper?" he cried out, more than ever like a bewildered boy.

Wilbraham, standing near the door, was studying the couple by the window. Stella didn't know that she was tihtly holding that boyishly resistant arm.

Wilbraham spoke. "For his own protection, Mr. Pew. His position is plain enough. He doesn't like Jazzland any more than you do. He's wishing he'd never touched it. But he can't let go. All he wants is to quiet things down, get as much of his money back as he can, and then as soon as he's free of Horwitz and Neddick, close the place up. You see, as it stands now, he's afraid even to hand them back the notes. They'd be unpleasant bits of paper for Horwitz and Neddick to have about the place. Even if he destroyed the notes, these men wouldn't let go. You may be sure they're holding him just as tight as they possibly can. Your Mr. Harmer is out on a limb, waiting for a nice quiet opportunity to crawl back to some safer position. But there won't be any quiet as long as you're hammering away at Jazzland."

"I'll hammer, all right," said Homer, "I'll hammer."

Wilbraham gave Stella a look that said: "Take care of him. Steady him." Then went quietly out.

* * *

"Homer, you simply must try to look at this situation rationally!"

"You really agree with Wilbraham, Stella? About Joe Harmer?"

"I do, Homer. It's so clear. He's the biggest personality in town.. People aren't going to change their opinion of him over night, just because you ask them to. They believe in him, and the blunt truth is, they don't believe in you."

Homer started; bit his lip. "No," said he, "they don't. They don't."

"Oh, they're sorry enough. They have got feelings. But they're not excitable people, you know. Not our Ackland folks. They're steady and patient and inclined to wait things out. They mistrusted your brother's judgment. They mistrust yours still more."

"Yes, I suppose they do."

"It's the truth, Homer. They feel that you're embarrassing Mr. Harmer in this Jazzland matter by forcing his hand. Their way would be just to leave it to him, and the police. They're a practical lot, you know. They're not much on crusades."

The boy—he seemed now no more than a boy—was caught in a slight convulsive shiver. "But Ham was murdered!"

"Come over here," she said, and led him, still resistant, to the couch. "You lie right down and try to get hold of yourself. You're carrying altogether too much of a burden to waste enregy in brainstorms."

(To Be Continued)

"Come over here," she said.

CHICAGO MUSEUM TO HAVE HUGE CANVAS, LARGEST IN WORLD

CHICAGO, June 30—The first seven paintings of a series which is to be the world's largest, most complete and most systematic representation ever yet attempted on canvas, of the life on the earth in prehistoric ages, has been placed on exhibition here with the reopening of Ernest R. Graham Hall of Historical Geology at Field Museum of Natural History.

In addition to the new paintings, there will be specimens of skulls, skeletons and miscellaneous bones of prehistoric afimals, obtained by the recent Captain Marshall Field Paleontological Expeditions to Argentina and Bolivia, displayed for the first time. Specimens of other creatures of past geological ages which were previously on view will also be found with various improvements in their installation. The hall has been closed for a year to permit of the execution and hanging of mural paintings, the installation of additional specimens, and the reinstallation of the others. A new system of indirect lighting has been instituted which displays the exhibits to better advantage than ever before.

Paintings Are Gift

The paintings are a gift to the museum from Ernest R. Graham, a member of the institution's board of trustees. Charles R. Knight of New York City, generally recognized as the world's leading artist in the restoration of prehistoric scenes, is the painter. In depicting the prehistoric world Mr. Knight has had for data the results of the researches of members of Field Museum's scientific staff, particularly Dr. O. C. Farrington, curator of geology, and Prof. Elmer S. Riggs, associate curator of paleontology. Other scientists throughout the country have also been consulted to aid the artist in making his canvases accurate according to the best obtainable knowledge.

The first of the paintings represents a scene on the earth during the cooling period after the planet had been thrown off as a fiery ball from the sun, and before any sort of life existed upon it. The second painting shows the beginnings of life, with the growth in fresh-water pools of blue-green algae or moss-like plants, the first form of life of which science has any definite knowledge, and of which any fossils have been found.

An Early Seashore

Another of the paintings now on view shows an early seashore, on which are seen the dominant forms of life thought to have existed in the Ordovician Period, which science estimates to have been about five hundred million years ago. In this painting are represented great straight-shelled mollusks, some of which were fifteen feet long. These were remote ancestors of the modern octopus and nautilus. In the same painting are also shown trilobites, which were distantly related to the crab family of today, and are believed to have been ancestors also of the insects of the present time.

Another painting shows the stogosaur, a giant armored lizard of grotesque and terrifying appearance, which lived about 100,000 years ago. Despite his fearsome dragon-like appearance, scientists believe this small-brained creature was quite harmless. He lacked any offensive weapons, and needed his armor badly to protect him from the more aggresive animals equipped by nature with sharp teeth and huge claws with which to attack. A group of egg-laying dinosaurs (Protoceratops), which lived somewhat earlier than the stogosaur, is shown in another painting.

Other Paintings

The other two paintings now placed on exhibition show the huge moas (Dinornis) of New Zealand, prehistoric birds which looked much like gigantic ostriches, and a group of immense kangaroos, which were as large as the modern rhinoceros, and are easily recognizable as the direct ancestor of the smaller kangaroo of today. These creatures became extinct in comparatively recent times, as the geologist figures time—that is, they lived more or less contemporaneously with the earliest men.

In each painting the environment is represented as it is believed to have appeared during the period in which the type of life depicted was in existence. The entire series of paintings, of which those now shown are the first to be completed, will consist of twenty-eight canvases, fourteen of which will in size. They will extend around be 25x9 feet, and fourteen 11x9 feet the walls of the entire hall, and will be arranged in chronological order according to their subjects. Several years will be required for the completion of this entire program.

JAZZ DRUMMING IS DANGEROUS JOB; IS SERIOUS ON THUMB

By ALICE LANGELIER
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

GENEVA, June 30.—Jazz drumming is a dangerous occupation, according to recent reports of the International Labour Office of the League of Nations which has been inquiring into the matter.

A special investigation shows that "a neurosis characterized by pain and cramp and a sensation of fatigue and constriction localized in the right knee has been reported in players on the triangle and drums which are set in motion by a pedal.

"Each blow, it was calculated, required an effort of 5 to 12 kilograms, and the artists had to give 180 blows per minute. Von Wurthenau has assembled sixty-two cases of paralysis among drummers affecting the extension of the distal phalanx of the left thumb."

Chronic tenosynovitis is also said to be a fairly frequent consequence of the way in which the drum sticks are held, setting up mechanical irritation of the tendon of the long extensor of the thumb, and even rupture at the tendon at the moment of the paroxysm of rolling.

Another discovery the Labour Office made was that chorus girls and theatrical artists who daily use large quantities of "make-up" in the course of their professions very frequently contract lead poisoning, because so many forms of grease-paint have a whitelead basis.

The report warns that actors and actresses who wear wigs that have been used by others are in great danger of baldness and tells of one case where an actress lost all her hair from this cause.

Other diseases which have a high rate of prevalence in stage circles are anemia, digestive troubles, eyestrain and varicose veins. Dancers very frequently suffer from eye troubles caused by dancing in the rays of the limelight. Dilatation of the heart frequently afflicts players of trombones, saxophones and other wind instruments used in these jazz days.

Autos are going to sprout wings and solve the problem of traffic jams in the near future, according to a French inventor, Jean de Chapdelaine, who has recently produced a little "flying Lizzie" an airplane without wings—in a word the "gyropter."

It has a closed torpedo body and four free wheels. The motor power is supplied by two rotors affixed to the sides like paddle-wheels of a ferry-boat. They while at the rate of 7,000 revolutions a minute, a speed which assures the stability of the machine. In case of an accident in the air, the rotation of the wheels keeps the machine from falling swiftly. In fact, the inventor says one will alight so softly as any feather.

When automobiles pile up on all sides and there seems no way out of the mess, Presto! throw the gears into vertical and take to the air—advises Monsieur Chapdelaine. In the very near future, this will be the only way out of traffic trouble.

He says that when the model is complete it will attain a speed of three hundred miles in the air and 150 miles on terra firma.

AIR COMMERCE IN EUROPE SHOWS GAIN WITH FAST SERVICE

LONDON, June 30.—One of the most striking features of the boom in air transport which is now evident throughout the whole of Europe, is the rapid increase in both the bulk and the value of the goods which are being carried by air between London and the Continent.

Special services of air-freighters have just been instituted by the Imperial Airways and the German Luft Hansa. A big twin-engined Handley-Page Rolls-Royce air freighter now leaves Croydon Aerodrome each morning at 6 o'clock for Paris, and goods collected in London over night are delivered in Paris the following morning.

A night goods service of smaller airplanes, runs from Berlin to London every night, collecting urgent freight for London at Essen and Cologne.

Practically all the gold exported to the Continent travels by air, and during the last three years no less than $125,000,000 worth of gold coin and bullion has been flown in and out of Croydon.

Live animals are constant air travelers. On the freight machines pedigreed dogs travel daily, and thousands of day-old chicks make their first flight by airplane. One air liner which recently arrived at Croydon from Holland was a veritable flying menagerie, having on board a small bear, fifty parrots, a monkey and a number of tropical fish in a tank of water.

GENEVA, June 30.—Jazz drumming is a dangerous occupation, according to recent reports of the International Labour Office of the League of Nations which has been inquiring into the matter.

A special investigation shows that "a neurosis characterized by pain and cramp and a sensation of fatigue and constriction localized in the right knee has been reported in players on the triangle and drums which are set in motion by a pedal.

"Each blow, it was calculated, required an effort of 5 to 12 kilograms, and the artists had to give 180 blows per minute. Von Wurthenau has assembled sixty-two cases of paralysis among drummers affecting the extension of the distal phalanx of the left thumb."

Chronic tenosynovitis is also said to be a fairly frequent consequence of the way in which the drum sticks are held, setting up mechanical irritation of the tendon of the long extensor of the thumb, and even rupture at the tendon at the moment of the paroxysm of rolling.

Another discovery the Labour Office made was that chorus girls and theatrical artists who daily use large quantities of "make-up" in the course of their professions

AIR COMMERCE IN EUROPE SHOWS GAIN WITH FAST SERVICE

LONDON, June 30.—One of the most striking features of the boom in air transport which is now evident throughout the whole of Europe, is the rapid increase in both the bulk and the value of the goods which are being carried by air between London and the Continent.

Special services of air-freighters have just been instituted by the Imperial Airways and the German Luft Hansa. A big twin-engined Handley-Page Rolls-Royce air freighter now leaves Croydon Aerodrome each morning at 6 o'clock for Paris, and goods collected in London over night are delivered in Paris the following morning.

A night goods service of smaller airplanes, runs from Berlin to London every night, collecting urgent freight for London at Essen and Cologne.

Practically all the gold exported to the Continent travels by air, and during the last three years no less than $125,000,000 worth of gold coin and bullion has been flown in and out of Croydon.

Live animals are constant air travelers. On the freight machines pedigreed dogs travel daily, and thousands of day-old chicks make their first flight by airplane. One air liner which recently arrived at Croydon from Holland was a veritable flying menagerie, having on board a small bear, fifty parrots, a monkey and a number of tropical fish in a tank of water.

The needs of a Growing Nation Change like Those of a Growing Man. The First America was a Land of Poverty and toil. The Pioneers wanted little besides Shelter, Simple Clothing, and the Primary Domestic Comforts.

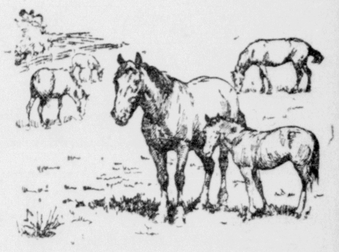

They buried Their Dead on their farms or on their estates. Later, as Settlements Grew, Burial Grouuds were established and the Tourist finds them spotted in the Fields and on the Hilltops, lonely, neglected and Quite Forgotten .

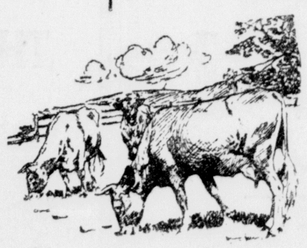

But America Today is a Vastly Different Nation; wealthy, powerful, gathering Momentum at every Stride; demanding and securing the Ultimate in Comfort, Luxury, and Display.

And with this comes, too, the age-old Desi re to preserve and to protect the soil and to beautify the place of living; And so it was with the Nations of Old as they grew into Power and Wealth.

Live stock that once roamed the clearings and made up in numbers for what was lacking in quality, must now meet the competition of the world's finest and must have the best that modern scientific feeding has devised. Disease carrying vultures can no longer be allowed to spread epidemic from herd to herd as they follow the trail of dead stock.

It builds a high grade tankage that is sold direct to the farmer at a saving of $10.00 to $20.00 per ton, and delivers its merchandise at no additional cost.

Its products are of such high grade quality that all are sold on a money back guarantee of satisfaction.

ALES MANAGER SHOWS PROPER FEEDING MAKES HEALTHY PIGS

By D. N. JAMES

he last few years we learned a e bit, I think, about how to cast d spirits into swine and to cast e evil spirits out. You know, a of our hogs still have evil cits. If they did not, we would have any deviled ham. One to get some good spirits into a as in a human being, is to feed well. You can reach the pig's mach as well as a man's stom- by feeding the proper feed.

First, I would like to make a par- lar plea for the thousands upon usands of brood sows that in- bit our farms. I make that plea as one who believes in prohibi- n, or the evil spirits of prohibi- n, but as one who believes that hat brood sow plea is answered t we will not only have more s at farrowing time, but we will ve more pigs that live, we will ve stronger pigs, and we will ve pigs whose mothers are bet- sucklers. Thus we will pave way for a greater porcine pros- ity. The way to begin, of rse, is to begin with the thers of these pigs.

As I travel from one end of this at state to the other, partly by t, partly by automobile, and er ways, I cannot but help no- e, as I step into the hundreds of d lots, how poorly the brood gs are fed.

In order that the young, which e to be born or farrowed from se brood sows, may be strong d vigorous and virile, it is abso- ely essential that the sows be d right. It is not enough to pick the scoop shovel and go over to e corn crib and shovel in a few rs of corn. That isn't enough. ither is it enough to give them rley alone, or wheat alone, or e alone, or any of these combina- ns and nothing else. They must ve more nourishing feed. If ey do not have more nourishing ed they cannot nourish their ung properly.

Now, let us change the scene. We ill put into the sows' ration not ly corn and salt, but we will give em a little "HOGMAKER" Tank- e, and on top of that some min- al mixture.

What difference does this new stem make? Instead of the pigs farrowing time weighing from e pound and a half to a pound d three quarters, they will weigh om two pounds to two and a half unds, and maybe more. Instead the pigs being fifty or sixty per nt strong, they will be ninety-five ninety-eight per cent strong. he pigs will be taller. They, the gs, will be longer. They will have ore hair. They will be the kind pigs that the first thing they em to say as the come bouncing to the world is, "Say, Mister, here is the 'Hogmaker' Tankage?" If you don't give the sows the roper supplements to the corn, nd the barley, and the wheat, what o the pigs from the sows do when ey come into the world? They on't say very much. They sorta hine and squealingly suggest, Please go away and let me sleep," nd the most of them sleep the sleep of eternity. Why? For two reasons—In the first place, they are weak, they are really sick. In the second place, they haven't had any feed which is particularly stimulating because their mothers were fed nothing but grain and those sows which are fed nothing but barley alone, or wheat alone, do not have the necessary milk. The "milk flow" "simply isn't there," and so the poor innocent, helpless pigs get none.

This is my plea for the brood sow, plea to feed her better, this not only during the period of pregnancy but during the period of suckling, for it is in both of these periods, the suckling period particularly, that depends very much whether or not you market your hogs at a profit.

Why, it is nothing unusual for a litter of eight pigs to gain a hundred pounds in thirty days. A hundred pounds is one third of the weight of a three hundred pound sow. A thousand pound cow that has a fifty pound calf will put on that calf by the end of the thirty days a gain of fifty pounds more; that would make the calf weigh a hundred pounds, and fifty pounds, the gain is only one twentieth of a thousand pounds, the weight of the cow. On the other hand, the little pigs that are well fed upon their mother's milk which has "Hogmaker" Tankage added to her ration, increase their weight thirty-three per cent of the equivalent of their mother's live weight, and a cow that gives all her milk to the calf makes a calf gain only one twentieth or five per cent of the cow's live weight.

On the whole it is economically a good practice to practically always stick to the basic feed of the farm, the corn of the cribs and to buy whatever protein, vitamine and mineral balances are needed in addition to the home grown pasture.

There is an economic place for a well compounded, high protein, high vitamine feed, such as "Hogmaker" Tankage; the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Company's own registered brand; which is of a supplemental, balancing nature, which is so compounded as to be a good corn balancer.

I wish to take this opportunity to extend the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Company's co-operation, in helping the livestock breeders and producers of Ohio, produce their livestock on a more economical basis, and will gladly furnish, upon request, formulas which are recommended by the state universities.

EXPERIENCED WORKERS

The Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., employs experienced men who have been with this company for fifteen years and are experienced in the making and handling of tankage. MANY GREENE COUNTY FARMERS ENDORSE XENIA-MADE TANKAGE

Greene County farmers who have used tankage manufactured by the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., for hog-feeding, are loud in their praise of the qualities of this feed.

The tankage contains proteins needed for growing purposes and for bone-making and other qualities. Feeding of tankage, practically a new discovery, has been growing by leaps and bounds as a result of the success achieved by farmers with this form of feed.

Two letters received by the company from Greene County farmers are convincing of the merits of the feed. They follow:

Cedarville, Ohio.
January 3, 1928.

Xenia Fertilizer Co.,
Xenia, Ohio.
Gentlemen:

Having fed your tankage for the last two years I am taking the pleasure of dropping you a few lines in regard to the results on my pigs this last summer. These pigs were fed your tankage, pasture, Pho-So-Ash Mineral and corn. Of a group of thirty-three head the average weight was 197 lbs., at 5½ months of age. I wish to impress upon you that these pigs had no special care, were farrowed and raised under ordinary farm conditions. These pigs had the mineral and tankage before them all the time.

The point I want to bring out is the fact that it only took 750 lbs. of tankage and 200 lbs. mineral to feed the entire thirty-three head, which I consider a very small cost for the amount of gain I made. It certainly convinced me that it pays to feed tankage and mineral on pasture.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) FLOYD SPRACKLEN.

Cedarville, Ohio
January 10th, 1928.

Xenia Fertilizer Co.
Xenia, Ohio.
Gentlemen:

With reference to your inquiry regarding the Hog-Maker, I wish to say, I fed forty head of shoats weighing about 135 lbs. each at start and made an average gain of 2 3-5 lbs. per day for four consecutive weeks. These hogs were weighed each week.

Using a mixture of 400 lbs. of your tankage and 100 lbs. of Pho-So-Ash Mineral feed mixed. As near as I can figure the entire forty head ate 400 lbs. of this mixture during the four weeks or an average of 1-3 lb. a day.

Having used your tankage for the past 2 1-2 years will say it is as good as any I have ever used, and I am more than satisfied with the results obtained from it.

Yours truly,
(Signed) J. H. THORDSEN.

BENEFITS OF PLANT TO FARMERS SHOWN BY OSCAR WERBER

Removal Feature Alone Big Saving To Stock Owners

By OSCAR WERBER
Owner of The Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co.

Farmers must realize the benefits of such a plant as The Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., from several standpoints.

First—Dead stock is removed promptly from your farms. This means an investment of thousands of dollars in trucks and the employment of capable employes.

Second—This service saves farmers labor and insures the correct disposition of dead stock. The law requires that a hole, six to eight feet deep must be dug for dead stock, on farms, thoroughly limed to absolutely kill germs. But, if the stock is diseased, the germs still remain on the grounds.

With such a plant as that of The Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., in the vicinity, the germ and disposition of stock problems are solved. The trucks of The Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., are equipped with sterilizing apparatus with which the grounds where diseased stock dies are sterilized and all germs are killed. The animals are hauled to the plant for reduction to valuable by-products. Each truck is thoroughly cleaned, scrubbed and sterilized after each trip.

For twenty-three years, the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., has served Greene County farmers in that capacity.

Now, a few competitors, owners of reduction plants, have taken advantage of the Xenia plant being out of business for a time following the fire that destroyed the local buildings and are advertising, announcing they will pay for dead stock. This practice has grown to such an extent, that the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., has had to resort to the same tactics.

The Xenia Fertilizer Co., is therefore now paying for dead stock, although the Xenia plant has repaid the farmers for collecting stock, through the tankage it furnishes them, insuring healthy stock. This plant saves farmers from $15 to $20 a ton on tankage. This rate has caused the competitors of the local concern to lower their prices which is just another service the Xenia plant is giving its patrons.

Small feeders are permitted by the Xenia plant to obtain as low as 500 pounds of tankage, delivered to their door at prices usually found in ton lots.

That service alone should make farmers send their dead stock and undesirable hides to the Xenia Fertilizer Co., instead of to outsiders who obtain such stock under the pretense they are paying for the same. nI reality, something is always "wrong" with the hide and the farmer is forced to have his stock hauled away with no payment to himself.

THEA TAKES UP SOCIETY MATRON

BUSINESS AS USUAL DESPITE BIG FIRE

Immediately after the old plant had been destroyed by fire, and its debris was still smoking and smouldering, Mr. Werber simply forgot about his great misfortune and immediately got some men busy and started them to cleaning up, and made plans for a new plant. He also purchased new trucks, so that the service he has rendered to the farmers in the past twenty years would not have to stop. He kept right on gathering dead and undesirable stock, and at all times has had the farmer at heart.

The new plant is equipped with the most modern and up to date machinery, which means that the farmer will be able to buy a much better tankage and which allows them to make a chicken feed, cattle, feed, etc., to sell for much less than the farmers have been used to paying elsewhere. It is Mr. Werber's idea to save the farmers of Greene and surrounding counties as much as he possibly can.

Best Wishes

To The Xenia Fertilizer & Tankage Company

This agency extends its congratulations to the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Company on the completion of a new modern plant. This plant is, in itself, a tribute to the progress of the farmers of Greene County. Built to meet the needs of one of the most progressive farming localities of the world, the new fertlizer and tankage plant embodies every detail that modern science has developed in this important line of industry.

COMPLETE EQUIPMENT

Few localities can boast of a plant that so scientifically meets the needs of the farmer by giving him expert help in the improvement of livestock—the product that has made this locality world famous. In building this expensive plant in this community the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Company has given concrete expression to its faith in the future progress and prosperity of Greene County.

In line with the modern methods used by the manufacturer of today The Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Company, has completely covered its splendidly equipped new plant with every line of insurance in complete form and coverage. This new plant is covered for all Casualty lines of insurance such as Auto Liability, General Liability, and Boiler Insurance with this Agency.

MANY GREENE COUNTY FARMERS ENDORSE XENIA-MADE TANKAGE

Greene County farmers who have used tankage manufactured by the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., for hog-feeding, are loud in their praise of the qualities of this feed.

The tankage contains proteins needed for growing purposes and for bone-making and other qualities. Feeding of tankage, practically a new discovery, has been growing by leaps and bounds as a result of the success achieved by farmers with this form of feed.

Two letters received by the company from Greene County farmers are convincing of the merits of the feed. They follow:

Cedarville, Ohio.
January 3, 1928.

Xenia Fertilizer Co.,
Xenia, Ohio.
Gentlemen:

Having fed your tankage for the last two years I am taking the pleasure of dropping you a few lines in regard to the results on my pigs this last summer. These pigs were fed your tankage, pasture, Pho-So-Ash Mineral and corn. Of a group of thirty-three head the average weight was 197 lbs., at 5½ months of age. I wish to impress upon you that these pigs had no special care, were farrowed and raised under ordinary farm conditions. These pigs had the mineral and tankage before them all the time.

The point I want to bring out is the fact that it only took 750 lbs. of tankage and 200 lbs. mineral to feed the entire thirty-three head, which I consider a very small cost for the amount of gain I made. It certainly convinced me that it pays to feed tankage and mineral on pasture.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) FLOYD SPRACKLEN.

Cedarville, Ohio
January 10th, 1928.

Xenia Fertilizer Co.
Xenia, Ohio.
Gentlemen:

With reference to your inquiry regarding the Hog-Maker, I wish to say, I fed forty Head of shoats weighing about 135 lbs. each at start and made an average gain of 2 3-5 lbs. per day for four consecutive weeks. These hogs were weighed each week.

Using a mixture of 400 lbs. of your tankage and 100 lbs. of Pho-So-Ash Mineral feed mixed. As near as I can figure the entire forty head ate 400 lbs. of this mixture during the four weeks or an average of 1-3 lb. a day.

Having used your tankage for the past 2 1-2 years will say it is as good as any I have ever used, and I am more than satisfied with the results obtained from it.

Yours truly,
(Signed) J. H. THORDSEN.

INTERESTING HISTORY BACK OF COMPANY

DEVELOPMENT OF PLANT SHOWS TANKAGE IS RECENT BY-PRODUCT

Recent Discoveries Show Value Of Feed For Poultry —For Cry From Original Plant To Present Modern Factory.

The Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., was opened for business in 1905 for the purpose of collecting dead stock. The hides of the animals were used as they are today, for making leather, but the other by-products' value was not realized and the reduced stock was used for nothing but fertilizer. Today, tankage is but one of the many by-products of the company, which has proven its worth to farmers, both in disposing of dead stock and the healthy growth of the living animals on farms over the country.

The Agricultural Department of Ohio, together with departments all over the country, have realized the feeding value of the offal and are understanding the growth of the reduction plants and are co-operating in their work.

Tankage has been introduced only within the last few years and whereas formerly it was only fed to hogs, it is now being used in great quantities in chicken feeds, the meat properties being found valuable in the growth of poultry.

So rapidly has the tankage business of the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., grown, particularly that of the poultry-feeding output, that the company is considering adding a department of chicken feed to the already rapidly growing concern.

A new building would be needed for the new department, standing fifty by fifty feet to accommodate the requirements of the poultry-feeding stock. Construction of the building will be begun in the near future.

Oscar Werber has been associated with the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., since 1910 and became sole owner in 1923. A short time after he took control of the business the output of the plant was increased many fold.

The various lines of the business were branched out until it is now one of the largest plants of its kind in this part of the state.

The plant was located in the same place as it is now, on the Hook Road, southeast of Xenia. Mr. Werber, immediately on his purchase of the business, installed improved machinery for the manufacture of tankage and set to work introducing tankage to the farmers of Greene County as a valuable feed in their stock's diet. The plant was destroyed by fire a few months ago, but has been re-built with every appliance and construction necessary to an up-and-going concern of its type.

MAGIC DIET

"A pig will make a hog of himself with Hogmaker Tankage." This snappy slogan has proved a valuable one for The Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co.

The slogan was adopted twenty years ago when the tankage business was in its infancy but has not lost its logic and farmers have found the value of its truth every year.

"The slogan has more than proved its worth," says Oscar Werber, owner of The Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co. It is registered and copyrighted, insuring its possession in the hands of the local tankage concern.

"SIGNAL OF LOVE" PROVES UNDOING

CLEVELAND, O., June 30.—A small piece of red ribbon used as a "Signal of Love" proved the undoing of Elmer J. Lynch, Girard, O., according to assistant district attorney, Donald C. Van Buren, here.

Lynch was held for the federal grand jury, charged with sending obscene letters through the mails.

He confessed, Van Buren declared, that he had written several letters to a young married woman who was his neighbor in Girard. In the letters, he enclosed a red ribbon which he told the woman to pin on the window curtain if she cared to see him.

The recipient of the letters turned them over to the post office inspectors who laid a trap for the writer by pinning a ribbon where directed.

Today 80 per cent of Ohio's reduction plant owners appreciate the acquaintance of Mr. Werber and his associates.

In 1923, when N. Ebner, of Springfield, retired from active business, Mr. Werber purchased the business which now bears his name.

SUFFICIENT FOOD TO SUSTAIN ARMY HAS BEEN DISTRIBUTED

COLUMBUS, O., June 30. — Enough food to provide rations for a company of soldiers for nine years was distributed to the women and children in the southern and eastern Ohio coal fields during the past winter when the plague of starvation descended upon the herds of the unemployed miners.

At the same time the company of "men at arms" could be clothed for more than a lifetime by the pieces of clothing that were given to the people in these sections.

This was made known exclusively to International News Service by a tabulation made by the Ohio National Guard officers who wintered in the sections.

Distribution of the food and clothing was made from two centralized points, Nelsonville in Athens County and St. Clairsville in Belmont County, the two hardest hit sections when the coal strike forced nearly every man in these two counties out of work.

Approximately 562,947 meals were served to the hungry women and children, innocent sufferers of the scourge of exposure and hunger thrown upon them by their husbands and fathers forced unemployment.

More than four times as many meals were served from the Nelsonville station than the one at St. Clairsville.

National guardsmen set up ninety four "kitchens" in the Athens district, which were operated for more than three months. About 471,131 meals were served out to the waiting lines of the hungry.

In the St. Clairsville district but eighteen of these "feeding stations' were set up.

CHIEF OF OHIO DEPARTMENT OF FERTILIZERS PRAISES PLANT

Septimus Mawer Says Xenia Company's Factory One Of Best; Emphasizes Value Of Reduction Plant To The Community.

"One of the finest reduction plants in this part of Ohio."

That's what Septimus Mawer, Columbus, chief of the division of feeds and fertilizers of the Ohio Department of Agriculture, thinks of the new plant of the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., Hook Road, two and one-half miles east of Xenia, recently completed.

Mr. Mawer is in a good position to make this kind of comment because he frequently urged Oscar Werber, owner of the company, to build a new plant to accommodate his business. With an ever-growing business in feeds and tankage being carried on, he believed the plant deserved new housing.

A fire that destroyed the old plant made the new plant not only possible but necessary and now the state department believes it is one of the finest anywhere. Mr. Mawer personally made an inspection of the plant recently although an inspector under his department makes regular examinations of all such institutions.

Reduction plants are required to have a license from the state to operate and proper sanitation is stressed to prevent the spread of contagious disease among domestic animals. Animals that die from any cause may reach the reduction plant, but if they are handled there in a proper and sanitary manner, no dangers remains of the spread of the disease.

"The county should be proud of this plant," said the chief here. It is of modern, fire-proof construction and contains the latest modern machinery for the work done. The principal feature from the standpoint of the state department is that it can be kept clean with the least possible effort. Tankage is sold for hog feed and this is one reason that the state insists on proper sanitation in a plant of this kind.

"A reduction plant," he continued, "is also a conservative institution. It is along the line of modern progress and development in that it utilizes what was formerly waste material. Dead stock in old times was buried. Now the hide is conserved for leather; the bone is made into bone meal for feeding purposes or is used for fertilizer. A by-product is the tankage which is a concentrated protein feed proven to have remarkable results in hog-growing. The residue grease is also an important by-product for it is sold to soap concerns for the manufacture of fine toilet soaps."

Pictures of Mr. Werber and Chief Mawrer were taken at the plant while the state official was on a tour of inspection and the new owner is proud of the approval the state has put on his new plant which was built at considerable financial sacrifice.

Great Dry Leader Marries

OFFERS ADVICE TO ALL STOCK GROWERS

Immediately after its fire the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., sent out about five thousand letters to customers and prospective customers, announcing that it was still in business, had converted its warehouse into a temporary factory and bought new trucks in order to continue to serve the farmers as it had in the past. In the letter was enclosed a card asking the farmer to return same with his name and address for which in return he would receive some valuable information, which is another service feature for the benefit of the farmer.

The Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., sends to the agricultural departments of the different states and gets the latest rations for feeding cattle, chickens, hogs, etc., and will be glad to send this information, which it will make up in bulletin form, to anyone returning the card which they received in the letter sent out or anyone visiting the plant personally will receive a valuable souvenir.

NICHOLS CONCRETE BLOCKS FURNISHED FOR NEW BUILDING

The Nichols Concrete Block Co., Dayton, Ohio, furnished the larger portion of the concrete blocks used in the construction of the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Company buildings.

This firm is one of the best known of its kind in this section of the country and supplies hundreds of thousands of building blocks each year for construction work in this civinity. The use of Nichols Convrete Block is recommended for both commercial and residential structures.

Its appearance, its utility, its low cost, its permanence makes it invaluable for almost every building need.

EIGHTEEN MEN ARE EMPLOYED BY FIRM IN ALL BRANCHES

The Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., employs eighteen men, in the various branches of the business.

Oscar Werber is owner and general manager of the concern and is assisted by D. N. James, sales manager and Dr. Dee McDonald, division manager. Mr. James supervises a corps of ten salesmen over a wide territory.

D. A. Stanley, foreman of the plant only recently became affiliated with the firm. He has fifteen years' experience in the tankage business and brought some valuable information to the local business.

Mr. Stanley is assisted by Quincy Lynch, who has been with the Xenia company ten years; and Leo McHaffey, who has been with the local plant as long.

WERBER DIRECTOR OF ASSOCIATION

Oscar Werber, owner of The Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., and its general manager, was honored recently when The Ohio Reduction Plant Owners Association was organized.

There are sixty-two reduction plants in Ohio according to Septimus Mawer, chief of the division of feeds and fertilizers of the department of agriculture, who recently visited the new Xenia plant, and most of the owners of these plants are represented in the new organization.

Mr. Werber was elected vice president of the new society and is a member of the board of directors. Purpose of the organization is to protect mutual interests and for exchange of information and ideas that will benefit all.

The board recommends laws to the State of Ohio which are introduced before the House of Representatives and voted on many becoming laws governing reduction plants.

In this way the state depends on the board members for information and ideas on sanitation.

CHIEF OF OHIO DEPARTMENT OF FERTILIZERS PRAISES PLANT

"One of the finest reduction plants in this part of Ohio."

That's what Septimus Mawer, Columbus, chief of the division of feeds and fertilizers of the Ohio Department of Agriculture, thinks of the new plant of the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., Hook Road, two and one-half miles east of Xenia, recently completed.

Mr. Mawer is in a good position to make this kind of comment because he frequently urged Oscar Werber, owner of the company, to build a new plant to accommodate his business. With an ever-growing business in feeds and tankage being carried on, he believed the plant deserved new housing.

A fire that destroyed the old plant made the new plant not only possible but necessary and now the state department believes it is one of the finest anywhere. Mr. Mawer personally made an inspection of the plant recently although an inspector under his department makes regular examinations of all such institutions.

Reduction plants are required to have a license from the state to operate and proper sanitation is stressed to prevent the spread of contagious disease among domestic animals. Animals that die from any cause may reach the reduction plant, but if they are handled there in a proper and sanitary manner, no dangers remains of the spread of the disease.

"The county should be proud of this plant," said the chief here. It is of modern, fire-proof construction and contains the latest modern machinery for the work done. The principal feature from the standpoint of the state department is that it can be kept clean with the least possible effort. Tankage is sold for hog feed and this is one reason that the state insists on proper sanitation in a plant of this kind.

"A reduction plant," he continued, "is also a conservative institution. It is along the line of modern progress and development in that it utilizes what was formerly waste material. Dead stock in old times was buried. Now the hide is conserved for leather; the bone is made into bone meal for feeding purposes or is used for fertilizer. A by-product is the tankage which is a concentrated protein feed proven to have remarkable results in hog-growing. The residue grease is also an important by-product for it is sold to soap concerns for the manufacture of fine toilet soaps."

Pictures of Mr. Werber and Chief Mawrer were taken at the plant while the state official was on a tour of inspection and the new owner is proud of the approval the state has put on his new plant which was built at considerable financial sacrifice.

Great Dry Leader Marries

OFFERS ADVICE TO ALL STOCK GROWERS

Immediately after its fire the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., sent out about five thousand letters to customers and prospective customers, announcing that it was still in business, had converted its warehouse into a temporary factory and bought new trucks in order to continue to serve the farmers as it had in the past. In the letter was enclosed a card asking the farmer to return same with his name and address for which in return he would receive some valuable information, which is another service feature for the benefit of the farmer.

The Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., sends to the agricultural departments of the different states and gets the latest rations for feeding cattle, chickens, hogs, etc., and will be glad to send this information, which it will make up in bulletin form, to anyone returning the card which they received in the letter sent out or anyone visiting the plant personally will receive a valuable souvenir.

NICHOLS CONCRETE BLOCKS FURNISHED FOR NEW BUILDING

The Nichols Concrete Block Co., Dayton, Ohio, furnished the larger portion of the concrete blocks used in the construction of the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Company buildings.

ERECTION OF PLANT IS HAPPY OCCASION FOR OSCAR WERBER

Enjoys Faith And Good-Will Of This Community.

By R. A. HIGGINS

This must be a particularly happy day for Oscar Werber, owner and general manager of the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co.

The people reading these pages today, learn that Oscar Werber has come to an unusually satisfactory period in his business career.

This special section of THE GAZETTE is devoted to extolling the virtues of the new plant now being put in operation by the company which he owns and manages. To Oscar Werber it represents not only a new era in the development of his business but it opens up a new avenue to the service which he is pleased to render Greene County farmers and the people of the entire community.

Perhaps to everyone there comes a time when the thrill of a lifetime seems embodied in a single achievement. Oscar Werber today is glad to tell all the people that he is enjoying the satisfaction that comes with a singular achievement after nourishing ideals over a period of years.

The Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., is not a new thing. It was conceived and carried out originally in a small way, first as a means of removing dead stock, acquiring the leather and manufacturing fertilizer. It was not until developments of science proved that a by-product made an excellent stock feed, that Oscar Werber began to see that he had developed a property bigger than any single man because it represented a boon to mankind. With the new feed stock raisers could achieve such results in preparing stock for the market as they had never thought of before. To an agricultural industry suffering from depression, anything that would improve its plight was a boon indeed. The Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., found that its new product was just this.

To Oscar Werber there comes today also the satisfaction of knowing that he has builded here a modern industrial plant not only on the ruins of one burned down, but on the foundation of business integrity established over a period of years. No industry can survive without the good will of the community. The Werber company was selling a product for farmers. If it was not actuated by honest motives and able to show results, the farmers of Greene County would have lost faith and when they lost faith the state and national markets would have disappeared. Instead the company finds itself in the enviable position of enjoying a rapid and healthy growth. This speaks an integrity of purpose that brings further satisfaction to the owner. Today the congratulations of his friends and of farmers who have never met him, are due to Oscar Werber.

VETERINARY OFFERS SPECIAL SERVICE TO TANKAGE PATRONS

Having associated Dr. Dee McDonald with the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Company, we take this opportunity of mentioning his experience as a veterinarian. Dr. McDonald graduated from the Indiana Veterinary College, in May, 1911, entering into general practice in Indiana in 1914. Seeking further light in swine practice he moved to Iowa, in the best hog section of that state.

After two years of practice in Iowa he returned to Indiana in a dairy and swine practice. Visualizing the great need of mineral to promote the health and growth of all live-stock, compounded a mineral for use in the pure bred Jersey herd of Whitford Brothers, of Kendelville, Indiana, which was suffering from the diseases which come to many herds of dairy cows and other breeding animals. Whitford Brothers, seeing the great improvement in their herd, entered into the manufacturing of this grade of mineral and gave it the name of PHO-SO-ASH MINERAL, which has been used extensively in Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and Illinois.

Dr. McDonald's services will be rendered free by the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Company, but will in no way conflict with any veterinarian in the state of Ohio, but to simply aid and assist feeders of tankage and mineral through the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co.

TANKAGE WAS UNKNOWN WHEN FERTILIZER COMPANY STARTED

The Xenia Fertilizer Company was founded in 1905, for the purpose of relieving the farmers of the monotonous and dangerous task of burying or burning diseased dead, and disposing of undesirable stock.

Had the farmers been compelled to bury all their diseased dead stock through this period of years, the soil would have been so contaminated with disease germs that today it would be almost impossible for them to raise a crop of any kind from the soil, not mentioning what harm it would have been doing to livestock.

As the Greene County institution grew, plants of this kind were few and far between, but in recent years they have sprung up and today there is a reduction plant within a radius of twenty miles of each community, which is a much appreciated convenience by the farmer. Years ago the benefits derived by the company engaged in this particular business was through obtaining the hides, which has always been the main source of the manufacturing of leather. At that time the carcass was cooked in an open kettle, instead of the modern inclosed tanks of today and the grease which was skimmed off the top, was utilized in the manufacture of soap and other material. The balance of the carcass was then sold as a product known as "fertilizer."

In those days, which was some twenty years ago, very little was known in feeding of tankage. It was not until later our universities took an active part in agriculture and through their agricultural research departments, found that this by-product of reduction plants, which was being used as a fertilizer was a valuable supplement in the production of pork and began to recommend the farmers to use tankage.

Oscar Werber remembers years ago when calling on different farmers, introducing the tankage as a feed for hogs, it was then practically unknown, and he has seen the Xenia Fertilizer Co. grow from a small industry to a plant supplying farmers not only in Greene, but all the counties neighboring Greene, with thousands of tons of tankage. Mr. Werber, who took charge of the Xenia Fertilizer Company some fifteen years ago, then owned by N. Ebner, Springfield, Ohio, takes pride in the growth of this company, which now bears the name of Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Company.

In 1923, when Mr. Ebner retired from active business, Mr. Werber purchased the Xenia Fertilizer Co., which consisted of about one hundred and fifteen acres of land, upon which the company's factory and other buildings are situated, and became sole owner of this business. Mr. Werber also takes an active part in farming.

On March 13, 1928, the original plant of the Xenia Fertilizer Co., was completely destroyed by fire, with a loss running into thousands of dollars. Mr. Werber immediately arranged to rebuild on the same site and today has one of the most modern and most sanitary plants in the state of Ohio. With the new equipment in his plant, he can produce several carloads of tankage a day.

Mr. Werber, in building his new plant, realized the necessity of bringing before the public the word TANKAGE, and has therefore added the name to the firm, which hereinafter will be known as XENIA FERTILIZER AND TANKAGE COMPANY.

PLANT MUST OBTAIN OTHER RAW PRODUCT THAN DEAD ANIMALS

Company Must Buy Dead Stock From Packing Houses

Oscar Werber, owner of the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., which is now occupying a handsome new plant on the Hook Road, exploded a popular fallacy recently when he said that dead stock hauled into the plant represented only a small amount of the raw material used.

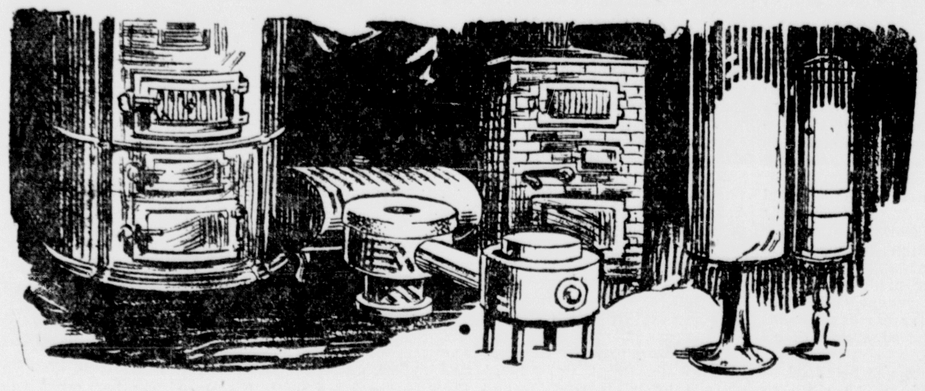

Dead stock is bought by the company, but it is only a side-line of the business, because the small amount available would not be sufficient to keep the plant in operation. Instead, most of the raw material comes from condemned meat killed at packing houses and shipped into the Xenia plant.

Mr. Werber, who calls on packing houses to buy this raw material, reveals that much of the meat killed in packing houses is condemned for eating by the federal inspectors always on hand. These men, placed there by the federal government, to safeguard the health of the people, recently condemned 109 head of cattle killed at a Detroit plant out of a total of a few more than 200 killed in one morning.

The condemned meat, then, is usually "cooked" by the packing company to get the grease, and the result is sold to reduction plants such as the Xenia concern, where it it manufactured into tankage for hog-feeding, bone meal or fertilizer. It is only by judicious buying of this raw material, that a plant such as the Xenia Fertilizer Co., is kept in operation.

The "cooking" given the diseased meat in the reduction plant is all necessary to kill the disease germs, so that there is no danger of spreading the disease and the state and federal government favor the reduction plant for this reason. The product is "cooked" by steam under 100 pounds pressure, registering 384 degrees Fahrenheit. It is then allowed to cool and is re-cooked under the same pressure. After cooling the second time it is reduced to ground meal form, when it is packed in sterilized sacks. Frequent state supervision insures the sanitation of handling so that the spread of disease is impossible.

William G. Morrison, Manager of the William G. Morrison Co.

Congratulations

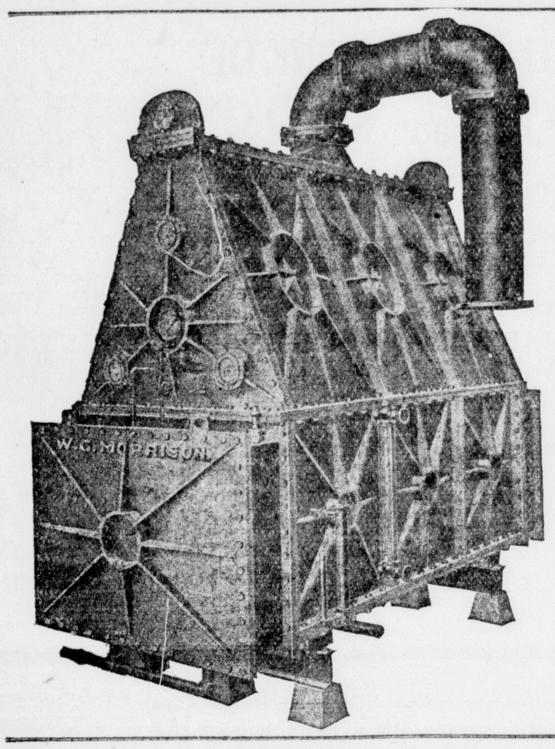

The William G. Morrison Company, wishes to take this opportunity to congratulate the Xenia Fertilizer Company on its up-to-date new plan t.

THE XENIA FERTILIZER COMPANY has been in business for almost a quarter of a century. During this time it has constnly been striving to improve their plant and equipment. In order to better serve the community, to improve the quality of their product, to make the plant as sanitary and odorless as possible. Consequently when they drew the new plans for their plant they specified "MORRISON" EQUIPMENT. This decision was arrived at after a thorough investigation of all other systems. The "MORRISON"system is the only one where one or more operations can be done in the same tank. It is the only system where WET or DRY rendering can be done and after which it can be used for building up which has enabled them to manufacture the well known "HOG MAKER TANKAGE." We wish also at this time to extend our best wishes for the success of MR. WERBER AND THE XENIA FERTILIZER COMPANY.

Yours Very Truly,

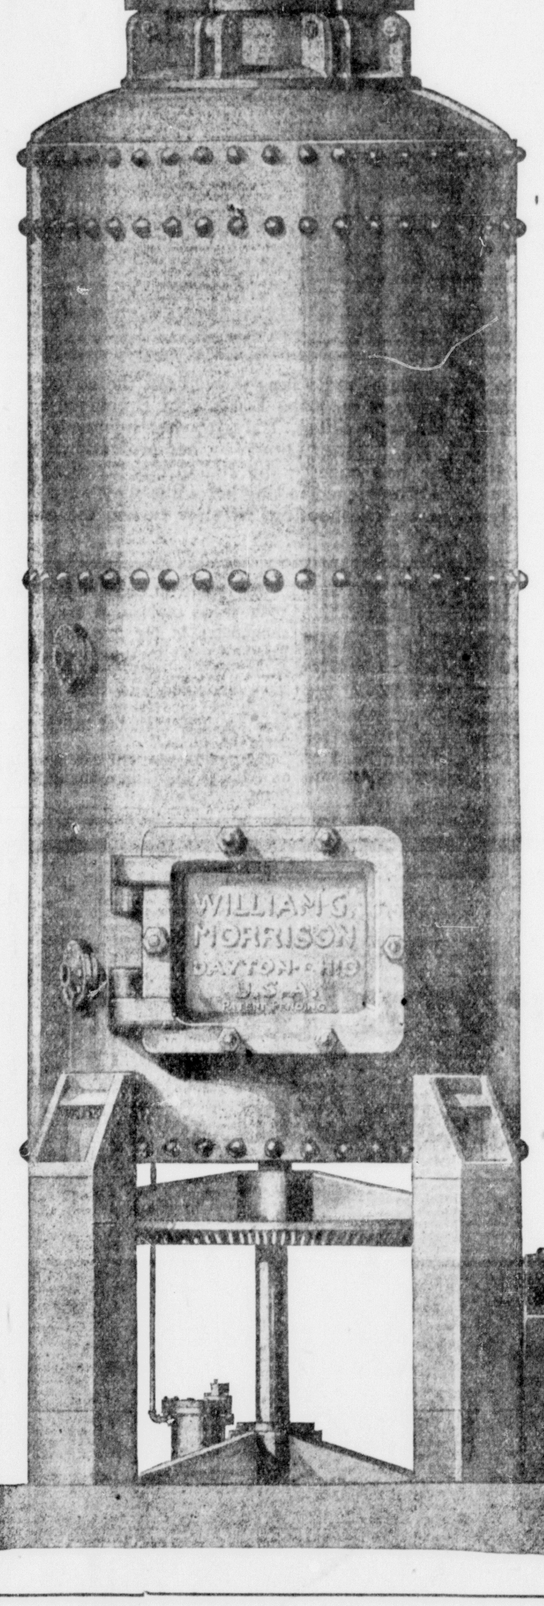

THE WILLIAM G. MORRISON COMPANY

WILLIAM G. MORRISON, President.

TANK WATER EVAPORATORS

We feel pretty certain that the Tank Water Evaporator installed in the Xenia Fertilizer Co, Plant in 1918 has paid its way many times because it has been the means of providing the material to build up "HOG MAKER TANKAGE"

THE Morrison Melter SAVES

STEAM

The design of this Melter is such that the steam is UNDER AND AROUND the material, making every inch of jacket space earn its way.

POWER

The Power consumption is remarkably low. Our largest Melter requires only twenty-five H. P. when fully loaded.

LABOR

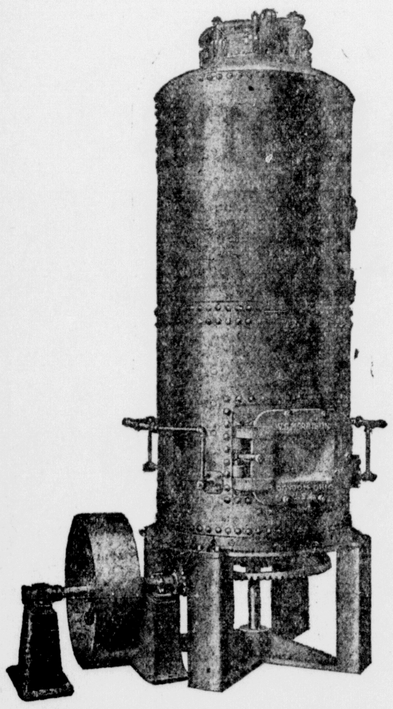

Easily charged and discharged and simple in operation. This Melter can usually be operated without an increase in your present force.

FLOOR SPACE

Our 62 in. Melter with a capacity of four to five tons per charge complete with motor and silent chain drives, occupies only 6 ft. x 9 ft. of floor space.

TO THE FIVE OR SIX HUNDRED USERS OF COMBINATION RENDERING AND DRYING TANKS:—

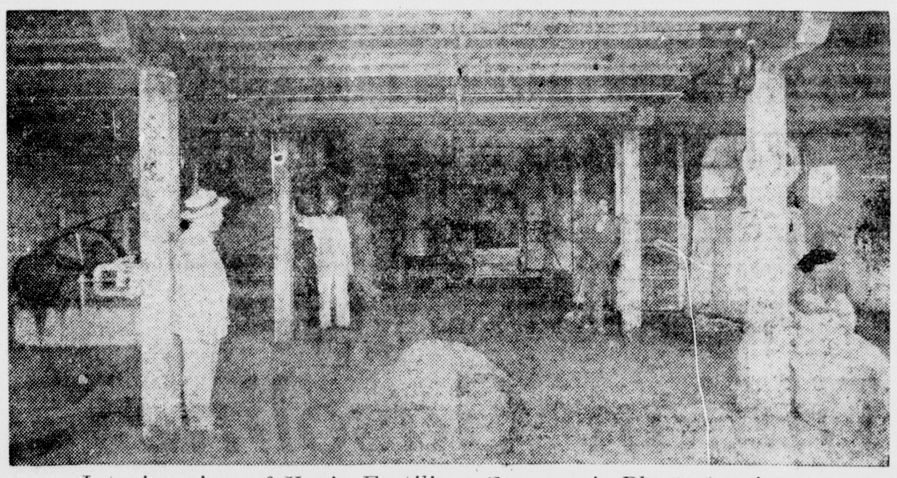

We can change your system which will enable you to operate WET or DRY without disturbing drives, base, vacuum system or piping, at a reasonable cost.

SINGLE SANITARY CONVERTER

The cut shown is of a Single Sanitary Converter and will hold from five to six head of grown stock.

This shows a Tank Belt Driven but can be changed to Motor Drive with silent chain drive or direct connected from Gear and Pinion. This tank is equipped with all fittings and fixtures including all valves and pipe and condensation trap.

MANUFACTURE OF TANKAGE IS INTERESTING PROCESS

The interesting process of the manufacture of tankage, is explained by Oscar Werber, president and general manager of the Xenia Ferdilizer and Tankage Co., for the benefit of those who are not familiar with the word tankage: "I will endeavor to explain what it is used for and its procedure of manufacture. Tankage, although having been on the market for the past fifteen years, is still in its infancy, but it is being used more and more every day, as it is an indisputable fact that it is the most important supplemental feed for balancing a ration in the production of pork today.

"There are several kinds of tankage being put on the market today, and the consumer must accquaint hiTself with the various brands and terms used. The most widely known and most available form is known as 60 per cent digester tankage, which is composed of pure meat, bone and blood, such as has always been used in the manufacture of "Hogmaker" Tankage.

"Oout of the several kinds of tankage that are on the market today, there are two kinds which in reality answer the same purpose, one is known as reduction plant or (deadstock) tankage, the other packing house tankage.

"Reduction plant tankage is made from dead and undesirable stock, collected throughout the country by reduction plants. The method of procedure is as follows:

"First: To remove the hide.

"Second: To destroy the entrails, hoofs and horns.

"Third: To cook the carcass.

"Fourth: To remove the grease.

"Fifth: Dry the meat and bone in the large tanks; (such as are shown in the accompanying edition) for a period of one and half to two hours.

"Sixth: It is then removed from these tanks in the form of tankage and is spread on the cooling floor.

"Seventh: It is then elevated to the vibrating screen which removes the non-digestible part.

"Eighth: The digestible tankage goes through an automatic sacker and is ready for the consumer in the form of a most recognized supplemental feed, which is known as "Hogmaker" Tankage.

"Packing house tankage goes through the same procedure, with one exception. They get their raw material from the meat condemned by the government inspectors, as diseased animals and from the carcasses such as are injured in shipping.

"Owing to the fact, that the past three years the ever increasing demand for the famous brand of Xenia Fertilizer Company's tankage has been far in excess of the amount of tankage that could be made from the collection of dead stock in this community, has caused Mr. Werber to devote a large part of his time to the purchase of tankage from various packing houses throughout the United States. However, the tankage which is secured from packing houses does not contain the necessary amount of protein, and must go through the building up process, which means the addition of the required amount of blood to produce the 60 per cent digester tankage, which is known as the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Company's "Hogmaker" brand.

BRUSH FOUNDATION DRAWING FIRE FROM DIFFERENT SOURCES

CLEVELAND, O., June 30.—Establishment of the $500,000 Brush Foundation, announced recently, the purpose of which is to make an effort to bring about a "perfect race of peoples" and to prevent "overcrowding of the world" has caused a flurry of comment for and against the idea here.

The half million dollars endowment was made by Dr. Charles F. Brush, inventor of the arc light and well known scientist, as a memorial to his son, Charles F. Jr., who died last year. The foundation's operations will begin as soon as interest on the principal starts to accrue which will be about July 1, it was said.

The income from the endowment is to be used, according to Dr. Brush, "to finance efforts contributing toward the betterment of the human stock and toward regulation of the increase of population to the end that children shall be begotten only under conditions which make possible a heritage of mental and physical health, and a favorable environment."

Dr. Brush declared if the board of governors of the foundation see fit to establish birth control clinics similar to those operated by the Maternal Health association, he will not object. However, he said, the Maternal Association will in no way be connected with the new organization.

Clergymen, physicians, jurists social workers and other professional persons were divided in their opinion as to the propriety of such a foundation and the dissemination of knowledge of birth control.

Bishop Joseph Schrembs of the Cleveland Catholic Diocese challenged Dr. Brush's theories that the ideal average family is three children by pointing out that he (Schrembs) was the sixteenth child of his family. Bishop Schrembs particularly disagreed with the aged inventor's estimate of existing conditions and his fear of overcrowding the universe unless procreation is modified. On the other hand many other clergymen expressed their approval of the Brush plan.

COUNTY AGENT KIMBER POINTS OUT VALUE OF UNIFIED ACTION

Co-operation Achieves Most For Farmer, Farm Bureau Secretary Says—Stresses Value Of Reduction Plant To Community.

By J. R. KIMBER

There has been a tendency to underestimate the benefits of farm organizations, particularly in associations organized for marketing or financial business service. Promotion has too often been based upon spectacular or sensational promises of savings, or other benefits as represented by immediate returns of dollars and cents. Experience proves that there has been a remarkable and successful development of co-operative marketing organizations, and personally I am inclined to be optimistic concerning their future.

In 1925 a number of large co-operative marketing organizations failed and in each case circumstances seem to be that producers were led to expect higher prices for their products than the market would afford under normal conditions. Since the mere fact of organization does not give control over price, disappointment and dissatisfaction became a large contributing cause of failure. We must recognize the fact that permanent benefits resulting from farm organization and co-operative marketing will be found in a satisfactory service continuing over a term of years rather than in large earnings or profits or largely increased prices in a single year's operations.

J. R. KIMBER

I do not wish to leave the impression that organizations do not control prices, but rather that organization in itself does not give arbitrary control of price. I believe it is fortunate that such is the case. Organization does influence price to the extent that producers will better prepare for marketing higher standards of quality, markets are sounder, and demand is stimulated, all of which has an influence on price.

The Farm Bureau all of its branches, county, state and national, is a conservative organization. Apparently its leaders have no illusions concerning miraculous results of organization, and it has been generally recognized that they must approach the problems of the day as they appear with a full realization of the changing conditions and relationship between agriculture and industry. The Farm Bureau has also recognized the fact that there is a need for concerted action and full co-operation between the various organizations which have been promoted to represent the interests of the agricultural producer. In its present form the Farm Bureau is not so much the result of a well-defined program but rather it is the result of evolution and development, based upon its knowledge of the needs and requirements of the farmer. Therefore, it has been necessary for the leaders of the Farm Bureau, in all its divisions to keep close to the problems of the farmer and to bring into its service facilities and personnel required to successfully promote those interests.

It is not my purpose to state that the farmers of Ohio will be saved one million dollars or any other amount, by reason of the existence of this company. The fact which seems to me to be the most important and material is that an organization has been set up to serve the farmers of the State of Ohio adequately and efficiently at the lowest possible cost. Continuity of this service over a term of years will undoubtedly assist the Ohio farmers to meet the ever increasing condition of costs which determine to a large extent the gains or losses resulting from their operations.

It has not been the policy of the Greene County Farm Bureau to trespass upon the field of any agricultural industry or co-operating association. It desires to co-operate and work with them in the interests of the individual farmer, and in this effort it extends an open hand to all who are willing to accept and to give such co-operation. Another well determined policy of the Greene County Farm Bureau is that it is a service organization and that it should not engage directly in any commercial activities. Unfortunately there has at times been friction between Farm Bureau and other organized co-operative associations where commercial activities have brought them into competition rather than in co-operation.

We recognize the fact that there is a community of interest between organizations of this character and that each one should confine its activities to the field and to the purpose which it was organized to serve. In most cases it will be found that these organizations serve practically the same group of farmers, and therefore it should be the interest of both to co-operate to make such service as efficient and as economical as possible. As I have supervised the audits of a large number of farmers' elevators in this state, it has been my pleasure to observe that in most cases the leaders of such organizations are prominent workers in their county Farm Bureau. Likewise it might properly be a matter of pride to the Greene County Farm Bureau that the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., are active and prominent members in the promotion of co-operative organizations and other agricultural associations, the purpose of which is to promote the interests of the individual farmer.

SERVICE TO FARMER

The Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., is an institution which is really a necessity to Greene and surrounding counties and the farmer should be proud of it. The farmer should realize that the service rendered by the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., not only saves him the trouble and time of burying his dead stock, but it also makes his farm less susceptible to cholera and different diseases. The State of Ohio encourages and recommends plants like the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., in order to combat the dreadful disease so common among hogs, which is known as cholera.

Three suits for divorce were filed in Common Pleas Court Thursday.

Florence Davis, in an amended petition asking divorce from Ralph Davis, alleges grounds of gross neglect of duty, charging that for the last five years of their married life, the defendant has refused to provide her with necessary clothing, and that his neglect became more aggravated until April, 1927, when she was compelled to obtain employment to support herself and their child, Deva, 8.

Her husband has given all of his time, money and attention to other women to the exclusion of his wife, asking divorce from George Ewing.

Altia Ewing complains in a suit asking divorce from George Ewing, 696 Chestnut St., Xenia, on grounds of extreme cruelty.

They were married July 26, 1920. Two children were born of the union, Donald, 7, and Dorothy, 4.

PRACTICAL JOKER SOUGHT BY CORONER

BELLAIRE, O., June 30.—Coroner John W. Neal, of Belmont County, is threatening political annihilation for the persons who perpetrated a particularly (according to Neal) obnoxious joke at his expense recently.

Neal was making a forceful speech at a recent meeting of the Eastern Ohio Republicans here, following which he was to unveil a photograph of Herbert Clark Hoover. He told of the wonderful man who was the subject of the picture he was about to unveil, describing him as one most fitted to be presiding and urging everyone to vote for him.

Neal brought his speech to a climax, dramatically tore away the flags covering the picture and gazed in horror upon—his own likeness.

LIBRARY USE GAINS DURING MAY REPORT OF LIBRARIAN SHOWS

Two thousand two hundred and nineteen more books were circulated during the month of May than in the same month of 1927, Miss Mildred Sandoe, district librarian, told the Greene County District Library officers at the June meeting.

Of these, 786 were recorded in the increase at the main library while 1,433 were distributed through the branches established in various localities.

The first five months of the year have seen 53,197 books circulated or almost as many as were circulated in the twelve months of 1926, when 57,238 books were issued to Greene County residents, said Miss Sandoe. In 1927 by the end of May, 27,742 books had been borrowed throughout the county.

"If there are any who question the advantages of county library service, remember, county service saw 25,455 more books borrowed during the first five months of the year than had been used during the same months of the preceding year, when the county system of book distribution was not in effect," says Miss Sandoe.

High Commissioner

Sir William H. Clark, appointed Great Britain's first high commissioner to Canada, began his career in public service as a clerk in the trade department of the government in 1899.

SALESMANAGER HAS WIDE TRAINING

D. N. JAMES

D. N. James, sales manager of the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., since entering the reduction and tankage field two years ago as a part-time employe of this company has rapidly climbed to the head of the sales force of one of the most progressive industries in Greene County.

Having attended the University of Illinois, Mr. James, specialized in animal husbandry, chemistry and law. Being the son of an Illinois farmer and real estate broker, he visualized the necessity of scientific co-operation with the farmer for the benefit of his livestock from a financial standing.

Realizing the benefits that could be derived from balanced rations, mineral and tankage, he began selling mineral to the farmers in his own state, having confined his services to two of the most leading mineral manufacturing companies over a period of several years. He has a wide acquaintance and many friends among the farmers in and throughout the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Iowa.

He came to Ohio as a factory representative of a mineral company. Shortly after his arrival he made the acquaintance of Mr. Werber and began selling Xenia Fertilizer Company's own registered brand known as "HOGMAKER TANKAGE," famous for so many years in Greene County. He began to introduce this product in the counties of Clinton, Highland and Fayette. Following his original ideas, trying to benefit the farmer and selling this tankage direct to the farmer, as the Xenia Fertilizer Company had been doing for so many years in Greene County.

Farm Notes

FERTILIZER RATIOS

Any conceivable fertilizer need of field crops in Ohio, can be met with one of a list of nine standard ratios of plant food. This is the opinion of the specialists in the departments of soils and agronomy of the Ohio State University, who have issued through the extension service of the university, a leaflet containing not only the nine standard ratios, but comprehensive information and suggestions regarding their use, on various crops and under various conditions.

Reduction of the number of ratios and analyses, is the result of concreted effort by the agronomists and the manufacturers of commercial fertilizers. Their objective has been to avoid the manufacture and distribution of a large number of fertilizers with different analyses, yet so nearly alike that the results from using them were practically the same, while confusion and difficulty arose in their manufacture and sale, because of the multiplicity of formulae used.

It was determined at a conference of agronomists and manufacturers held last fall in Chicago that the manufacture of fertilizers could be made less costly, if the analyses produced were limited in number.

The leaflets which contain the list of the nine standard ratios, together with a chart covering their use under various conditions, may be obtained by farmers through their county agents or direct from the extension service of the Ohio State University.

JUDGE FERNEDING NAMED BY VETERANS

Judge H. L. Ferneding, named by the United Spanish-American War Veterans of Ohio, as their judge advocate general, is well known here being the presiding judge of the court of appeals of this district. When the war with Spain came, Judge Ferneding enlisted in his home at Dayton, and became a member of Troop F, First O. V. C. He is now a member of the veterans' organization, Liscum Camp, No. 7, Dayton.

As judge advocate, he will interpret all the regulations of the organization and give opinions when questions on the meaning of certain sections of by laws and constitution come up in any camp. He will also conduct any court martial trials. The veterans just concluded the reunion at Chillicothe, O.

LUMBERTON

Mr. Jacob Oglesbee attended the funeral of Mrs. William Pond held at the New Antioch Church, Sunday afternoon.

Miss Catherine Michener entertained her friend Miss Ethel Miller of Dayton at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Michener over the week end.

The Misses Avenelle and Ruthalee Black of Portsmouth are visiting in the home of their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. John Hunt.

Children's services were largely attended Sunday night. Quite an interesting program was rendered after which our pastor Rev. Roberts gave the address.

High Commissioner

Sir William H. Clark, appointed Great Britain's first high commissioner to Canada, began his career in public service as a clerk in the trade department of the government in 1899.

SALESMANAGER HAS WIDE TRAINING

D. N. JAMES

D. N. James, sales manager of the Xenia Fertilizer and Tankage Co., since entering the reduction and tankage field two years ago as a part-time employe of this company has rapidly climbed to the head of the sales force of one of the most progressive industries in Greene County.

Having attended the University of Illinois, Mr. James, specialized in animal husbandry, chemistry and law. Being the son of an Illinois farmer and real estate broker, he visualized the necessity of scientific co-operation with the farmer for the benefit of his livestock from a financial standing.

Realizing the benefits that could be derived from balanced rations, mineral and tankage, he began selling mineral to the farmers in his own state, having confined his services to two of the most leading mineral manufacturing companies over a period of several years. He has a wide acquaintance and many friends among the farmers in and throughout the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Iowa.

He came to Ohio as a factory representative of a mineral company. Shortly after his arrival he made the acquaintance of Mr. Werber and began selling Xenia Fertilizer Company's own registered brand known as "HOGMAKER TANKAGE," famous for so many years in Greene County. He began to introduce this product in the counties of Clinton, Highland and Fayette. Following his original ideas, trying to benefit the farmer and selling this tankage direct to the farmer, as the Xenia Fertilizer Company had been doing for so many years in Greene County.

Farm Notes

FERTILIZER RATIOS

Any conceivable fertilizer need of field crops in Ohio, can be met with one of a list of nine standard ratios of plant food. This is the opinion of the specialists in the departments of soils and agronomy of the Ohio State University, who have issued through the extension service of the university, a leaflet containing not only the nine standard ratios, but comprehensive information and suggestions regarding their use, on various crops and under various conditions.

Reduction of the number of ratios and analyses, is the result of concreted effort by the agronomists and the manufacturers of commercial fertilizers. Their objective has been to avoid the manufacture and distribution of a large number of fertilizers with different analyses, yet so nearly alike that the results from using them were practically the same, while confusion and difficulty arose in their manufacture and sale, because of the multiplicity of formulae used.

It was determined at a conference of agronomists and manufacturers held last fall in Chicago that the manufacture of fertilizers could be made less costly, if the analyses produced were limited in number.

The leaflets which contain the list of the nine standard ratios, together with a chart covering their use under various conditions, may be obtained by farmers through their county agents or direct from the extension service of the Ohio State University.
